As to the Third party-movement, that is now quiescent. Col. Polk and his coadjutors have for the preseut put it in the background, and the Progressive Farmer has strongly advocated that all sorts and condis tions of men should go into the Dem-ocratic primaries Under these circumstances, the Third party agitators have grown less demonstrative; and we think it will be difficult for them to recover their lost ground. Although it is expected that Col. Polk will again erect the standard and seek to draw the Alliancemen off into the Third party, he will probably discover when too late that men cannot be dragged about in that style .- Raleigh News Chserver.
