CHICAGO, Ost. 19 .- The programme of the celebration proper commenced this morning with the arrival of the Cabinet officers, Diplomats, etc. In the afternoon the last of the military will arrive and the celebration by the public schools takes place, followed in the evening by a reception and banquet at the auditorium. Thursday moreing is the civic parade, with 75,000 people in line. Friday morning a procession of the guests of the day will start from the auditorium for Jackson park. The parade will be reviewed in Washing ton Park by the Vice President Morton. At noon the dedicatory exercises take place. In the evening will be witnessed the inauguration ceremonies the World's Congress at the audit rium with the oration by Archbishop Ireland. In the evening the fireworks display will occur. Saturday morning the dedication of the State buildings. and in the alternoon the militar, manoeuvers will take place. Sixteen hundred tickets to the dedication ceremonies, stolen from the office of Secretary Culp, of the ceremonies committee, are on the market and a large number of forged tickets are also on sale. The school children this morning celebrated Columbus Day. Youthful enthusiasm was given the widest play.

A committee representing the State and city superintendents had arranged a programme for the celebration in he public schools and the children executed this order of exercises with a vim. When the schools opened no union or concentration of pupils was attempted, but the exercises began simultaneously in scores of school buildings. The rooms were all decorated appropriately to the occasion and so as to commemorate the great discovery. The first exercise was reading of President Harrison's proclamation. This was the followed by a flag raising and the pupils saluted the colors. They also pledged their allegiance to the flag in concert and saug "America." The next few hours of the programme was reading of the Scriptures or some influence on the stock market this acknowledgement of a Divine Being.

Mr. Hester, of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, Interviewed on the Matters in Dispute. NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 19 .- The Pic-

Southern interior cotton centres, which the St. Louis Republic states were furnished with blank petitions favoring a change, only twenty-eight towns re-sponded. He says that before the publication of the St. Louis Republic article there was very strong sentiment in favor of the change to a low middling clause, but that the fact, developed by the St. Louis Republic, that over 970 leading Southern centres failed or refused to endorse the petition for the change is mainly responsible for the revulsion in sentimeat in New Orleans. Hester says that the report sent by the Galveston exchange to st. Louis and other exchauges is ex remely diff. erent from those sent to New Orleans; that the resolutions sent to New Or-leans declined to join in opposing the Hatch bill because of the d fierence of Galveston exchange; that in the resolutions sent by Galveston to St. Louis nothing whatever was said about this only asking for a change in the form o contract.

In answer to the question what Galveston wants, Hester says his people are uncertain, but adds that he has official data indicating that the wish of the Galveston exchange for the passage of some such measure as the Hatch bill is due to the belief that the Hatch measure will stop dealing in free onboard and forward delivery business. thereby greatly injuring the business of small Southern towas and driving it to larger cities Hester insists that the prosperity of New Orleans and other large Southern centres must, of necesbe based on the prosperity of smaller commercial communities in the South and that, whereas, much the business that was formof erly done at large cities is now controlled by interior towns, for the prosperity of the latter gives ample scope for brains and capital of larger seaboard cities. Hester also stated that, in common with New York, the belief is firmly entertained that the present form of contract is undoubtedly the fairest that could be used for both planter and consumer; that of course morning.
