RALEIGH, Feb. 6. The annual report of the penitentiary for 1893 has been placed by Superintendent Leazar in the hands of Governor | month Carr, Mr. Leazar assumed his responsible duties on the 15th of last March. Yesterday afternoon J. H. Calloway, a In his report he says he at once applied prominent young man of Atlanta, acci- himself to a careful study of the general condition of the penitentiary, especially the assets in hand and the course and prospect of operations for the year. By April he took a complete inventory of all property. 1,191 bales cotton, 3,150 bushels of wheat, 12,500 bushels of peanuts, 4,000 bushels of field peas, and large garden and for-age crops. Fifty thousand pounds of pork has been produced, though the loss of hogs by cholera was equal to the amount thus saved. The panic destroyed all prospects of new enterprises and of all public employment; the floods of the Roanoke devastated the farms, yet the penitentiary realized during the year of 13 months an amount of assets greater than the amount paid out. During the present year it is the purpose to employ the entire force of able-bodied convicts in farming. To this end, and for a better assurance of future mainte-nance, every effort is being made to increase the area under cultivation, and some 2,500 acres will thus be added. Mr. Leazar says he is inclined to say that with fair seasons and no great disasters the penitentiary can be expected to make cannot undertake to guarantee so desirable a result. The health of the convicts has not been so good as he had hoped for. Although there has been an unusual amount of malaria at the farms, yet the Maze, colored, broke into and robbed a aggregate of deaths has been about the same as for 1892. On the two farms known as Northampton and Halifax there were only 3 deaths out of 400 convicts. The convicts have generally been obedient and orderly. There has been no serious trouble and the exercise of discipline has been required with comparative infrequency.

The hospital reports show 222 cases treated and 17 deaths, these being in the central prison. Thirty-two sick were sent there from the farms and of these 12 died, Consumption caused 10 deaths. The financial exhibit is as follows: Total charges $163,061.29, of which $40, day night. A colored man in a difficulty 929.35 was from December 1, 1892, to with his mother-in-law cut her throat. SPEECHES IN BOTH HOUSES OF EXCITING ORDER.

A Tilt Between Senators Daniel and Frye-Vote on Election Law Repeal Bill to be Taken To-Day-Hawaiian Resolutions Dis- 13. cussed in Lively Style-Filibustering Prevents a Vote.

SENATE. WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.-Immediately on the conclusion of the routine morning business the Senate resumed consideration of the House bill to repeal the Federal election laws, and Senator Hawley. of Connecticut, made an argument against it. Everybody, he said, knew the Democratic party secured National control it had been evident that the repeal of the Federal election laws would be one of the first tasks to which it would set itself. Except the Emergency bill, relating to the repeal of the Sherman Silver Purchasing act, this bill was the first distinctive party measure of the Democratic party. The laws now to be repealed were not, Senator Hawley said, made merely for the Southern States. While nullification of the right of sufwere just as much needed in certain sections of the North as they had ever been needed in the South. There had been as audacious crimes against the suffrage of mercy on mankind." committed within the last few years in the North as in the South.

Senator Perkins, Republican, of California, made an argument against the bill. It seemed to him that those who had spoken in favor of its passage had done so from a feeling of partisan preju-dice. He had waited patiently for some reason to be given why the Federal election laws should be repealed. But, up to this time, only two reasons had been given that had impressed his mind. One Chicago city council had given the Metro- of those reasons was that given by the Senator from Illinois (Palmer), that the laws had not been enforced, and the other was that they had been passed by the Republican party for the purpose of perpetuating itself in office.

Senator Daniel favored the repeal ef ism. These laws had been the outgrowth tions and asserted that on that testimony that antagonism had now ceased, as He said if Mr Stevens had been guilty of orders of President Cleveland. parties everywhere attempted to ameliorate it, this relic of the old antagonism should be laid aside, and a new era welcompromise, comity and fraternal con-

Senator Frye opposed the bill, and quoted from Richmond, Va., papers the headlines to reports of election frauds in a recent election in that State. He was asked by Senator Daniel whether the Federal election laws had anything to do with those frauds. They had, Senator Frye declared. The claim had been made that the Federal election laws ought to be repealed because the States (the whole of them) could be trusted to prevent election frauds. He was asked by Senator Daniel if there never had been election frauds in Maine, and he denied that there had been, although there had been an attempt by a Democratic Governor to steal a Legislature. But he had taken the floor, he said, not to make any attack on the State of Virginia, but to defend the character of John I. Davenport, who had been the subject of charges and calumnies in the two Houses for the last six-

Senator Harris described the rise of the Federal Government from the "Boston tea party" down to the present time. In the course of his historical review, he referred to the opposition made by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in the early days, to giving powers to the Federal authority. And he expressed his regret that Massachusetts of the present day did not show the same spirit. He was reminded by Senator Hoar that the State of Tennessee had voted for the election laws that were now to be repealed. Senator Harris explained that by the fact that in 1871 the itelligent people of Tennessee had been

Senator Daniel again took the floor and criticised Senator Frye for picking up newspaper scraps and reading the for partisan purposes. Whenever that Senator, he said, would rise and rebuke persons of his own party whom others thought worthy of criticism, he (Daniel) would realize that the Senator was on a plane with the Democrats of Virginia. The people of Virginia were not pharisees, and if they committed wrong they did not do it in the name of God and Christianity and civilization. The Senator from Maine when he chose to steal some islands and their people, dropped all his qualms and scruples, and Stevens, and with the military at the polls, had counted in 2,000 Americans House Mr. Reed employed his dilatory

With very little preliminary the House at 11:10 o'clock took up consideration of the resolution of the Foreign Affairs committee censuring Minister Stevens, and Mr. Outhwaite addressed the House. Mr. Reed moved to recommit, and this was lost-yeas, 90; nays, 160, Mr. Cummings, of New York, voting with the Republicans. The question then recurred on the original resolution offered by Mr. Mc-Creary.
