During the discussion this afternoon Senator Vest took. Senator Brice to task for an interview which appeared in a New York paper in which he quoted certain state-ments made by Republicans concerning the Finance committee. Senator Brice replied that it made little difference as to who made the statements; the essential fact to be known was whether or not they were true. Senator Brice denied that he was making fight for wool, but said he wanted to see a bill constructed upon which all Democrats could agree. Short speeches were made by Senators Lindsay, Blackburn, Ransom, Jones and others, all indicating a desire to have the disputed points settled before the bill was made public. It was understood, and this idea was brought out in debate, that if this could be accomplished, the Democrats would do very little talking when the bill came before the Senate. The session of the Senate to-morrow will be very brief for an early adjournment was taken to permit the holding of the caucus during the afternoon. It is probable that after the whole bill has been discussed an effort will be made to bind the Senators to the action had.

souri that in his opinion the bill would have been disposed of long ago if it had been properly managed. And it took a good deal of courage, he said, for a gentle-man to assert the contrary and endeavor to view, of how the majority of the Finance committee was proceeding in making its bill, about which no other Democratic Senlin and Springer were standing behind Mr. ator knew anything. Senator Brice told Bland and the latter asked Mr. Reed when the President this course was irritating he would agree to close the debate, "When we get through," answered Mr. Reid. days ago, they again plucked up courage and put out their lines. Pardridge, who is in California, attending the Mid-Winter fair, sold a big line through his own house. which initiated the break that afterward carried prices 11c below the final figures of Saturday. Those who sold early covered around the inside prices, causing a frac-tional reaction before the close. The open-ing was weak. May opened ac lower at 59¹/₂ to 59²/₃c, sold between 60c and 58²/₃c, closing a to so under Saturday, at 59¹/₂c.

Corn was in line with wheat, as was to be expected. It is generally understood that the sympathy between these two grains will be closed until the opening of navigation. The influence bearing on the market was sufficient, however, to cause a natural de-cline. May corn ranged between 364 and 364c and closed $ to 1c lower than Saturday at 364 to 364c. Oats were a trifle steadier than corn, but, a preparation of cod-liver nevertheless, a weak undertone was apparent. May oats closed 1c under Saturday. Cash oats were 1 to 1c lower. oil almost as palatable as Provisions ruled weak, through sympa-thy with the speculative decline in wheat. There was an excessive run of hogs at the yards with lower prices quoted for them, which, of course, had a depressing effect. A prominent packing concern bought freely of port and lard, which resulted in a reac-tion from bottom prices. There was a moderate shipping demand. The domestic markets were lower and foreign firm.
