Birds That Come and Go. There are some birds that depend almos entirely for their means of subs upon the light winged summer flies that love the sunshine. These the economy of our cold season does not provide for. The tree creepers and the tits, insectivorous in their propensities, are content to seek food in the crevices of bark, up and down the branches of old trees, in the cracks of walls, in and out among the stones and bricks of old buildings, peering, probing, pecking at the creatures that have thought to get safely through the cold weather by hiding. Not so our migrant singers. Many of them, like the swallows, eat only such things as they can catch in their swift flight open mouthed through the air. These are few and far between in the raw and cold atmosphere of winter here. Swift and swallow, nightingale and cuckoo, warbler, wheatear, whinchat, blackcap, wryneck, flycatcher-all the merry troop of strolling singers-must follow the sun and the creatures that dance in the sunbeams to lands that are sunny in winter. The movements of the birds that come and of the birds that go in spring and au tumn are prompted by the abundance or the scarcity of certain kinds of food among the varied store our land affords. The no madic wanderings of our resident birds are also foraging expeditions. Only in the spring and the early summer are any birds able to find the food they require in one particular neighborhood.

Then insect life abounds, and round about the nesting place enough and to spare is to be found both for the busy parent birds and the insatiable chicks and squabs. But in the autumn and winter there is, strictly speaking, no such thing as a stationary population of birds in any place. Then all turn gypsies and hither and thither wend their restless way, eluding the famine of a frost here, the dearth of a snowstorm there or the buffeting of storm winds by continually moving on .-Cornhill Magazine.

Woman In the Ascendant.

It would be harder to say what women are not doing these days than what they are doing, for their ambition has become as boundless as work itself, and there is hardly an industry, or a profession, or an office of any kind where their persevering presence cannot be found. Woman has by her own deserving efforts become man's competitor, even to the very thresh-old of equal rights, and has enthroned herself within the very sanctuaries that were once sacred to man alone. But it must not be thought in conse-quence of their wider field that woman's hand has lost its cunning for womanly employment and womanly arts, and that her interest flags in the ever particular sphere of domesticity, for such is not the case. Never before in the history of womankind has her own exclusive work received so much attention or reached such a state of perfection. A visit to the women's exchanges and decorative art rooms furnishes a revelation. The tawny machine work, which is so enticingly displayed in our large empo-riums, would pale with disgust at the comparison of dainty needlework, laces, embroideries and linen drawn work of every conceivable design and description here, all done by the dainty fingers of women; exquisite hand painted china, vases, dinner cards, picture frames, handkerchief boxes and jewel cases; the loveliest cen-terpieces, doilies and table scarfs, embroidered with lifelike clusters of violets and wood flowers .- Brooklyn Eagle.

Boys From Twelve to Twenty. Boys from 12 to 20 are the most important factors of society and should receive the best thought and care of home, state and church, whereas they do not receive even an average amount. Infant years, on the other hand, have been greatly overestimated in regard to their influence upon the mental and moral life of man. Under the age of 10, the child, physically, mentally and morally, is in the germ. During the first 12 months of life the babe is coming into consciousness of its own life, learning how to recognize its mother; how to use its eyes for seeing, ears for hearing hands for feeling, voice for laughing and speaking, feet for walking. In a like man-ner the first 12 years of childlife are used in coming into a knowledge of the great world about him. They are years in which he learns to use words, books and tools; learns to distinguish form, size, number and color of objects; learns his way about the village, town and neighboring city; learns, in short, his relation to the surrounding world. They are years of awakening, constant surprises. He has no taste or ability for mature or continued thought. During these early years you can no more establish the mental, moral or religious life of the child than you determine what shall be the first 10 words the babe shall speak or on what day or hour it shall take Leave Wilmington..... its first step.—Rev. A. E. Winship

An Ingenious Theft. In Paris the other day a young and good looking woman stopped a cab on the boulevard and ordered to be driven to the Rue St. Martin. Before entering the cab the woman asked the coachman to give her change for a 5 franc piece, which the latter did. As the cab began to move she made a sign to a man standing on the pavement, who began to run alongside one of the windows. An instant later the passersby on the boulevard were surprised to see the coachman spring from his seat, wrench open the door and demand his purse, which he declared his fare had stolen. It appeared that as soon as she had entered the cab she had let down the front window and abstracted the coachman's purse. The change for 5 francs had only been asked for in order to see in what pocket he kept his money. As soon as she got possession of the pure she had thrown it to the man running alongside. This the coachman had observed and at once became aware of the loss which he had sustained. The woman was at once
