Mrs. Hattie Mylius, of 70 East 86th street, New York, says that she was in poor health, and that her case developed into nervous prostration. She suffered from nervous headaches, and at times was unable to do any work at all. She could not sleep, and was so nervous that she would have to get up at all hours of the night and walkthe floor, and the opening of a door would startle her. But her weakness and nervousness is all gone. P. P. P. was what saved her. Her appetite improved, her nervousness is a thing of the past, and she thanks P. P. A GREAT SACRIFICE.

REV. DR. TALMAGE ILLUSTRATES THE ATONEMENT.

He Explains the Theory of Vicarious Sacri fice-The Blood of Christ-Cases of Substitution-Life For Life-Frequence of Suffering For Others. nage, in this sermon, draws graphic illustrations of one of the sublimest theories of religion-namely, vicarious sacrifices. His text was Hebrews ix, 22, "Without shedding of blood is no remission."

John G. Whittier, the last of the great school of American poets that made the last quarter of a century brilliant, asked me in the White mountains, one morning ood of Christ to the soul?" My nagative reply then is my negative now. The Bible statement agrees with all physicians, and all physiologists, and all scientists, in saying that the blood is the life, and in the Christian religion it means simply that Christ's life was given for our life. Hence all this talk of men who say the Bible story of blood is disgusting and that they don't want what they call and that they don't want what they call a "slaughter house religion" only shows their incapacity or unwillingness to look through the figure of speech toward the thing signified. The blood that, on the darkest Friday the world ever saw, cozed or trickled or poured from the brow, and the side, and the hands, and the feet of the illustrious sufferer, back of Jerusalem, a few hours coagulated and dried up and forever disappeared, and if man had

In order to understand this red word of my text we only have to exercise as much common sense in religion as we do in everything else. Pang for pang, hunger for hunger, fatigue for fatigue, tear for tear, blood for blood, life for life, we see every day illustrated. The act of substitution is no novelty, although I hear men talk as though the idea of Christ's suffering substituted for our suffering were something abnormal, something distressingly odd, something wildly eccentric, a solltary episode in the world's history, when I could take you out into this city, and before sundown point you to 500 cases of substitution and voluntary suffering of one in behalf of another. In order to understand this red word o one in behalf of another.

At 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon go among the places of business or toil. It will be no difficult thing for you to find men who, by their looks, show you that they are overworked. They are prematurely old. They are hastening rapidly toward their decease. They have gone through crises in business that shattered their nervous system and mulled on the one in behalf of another. their nervous system and pulled on the brain. at night an insomnia that alarms them. Why are they drudging at business early and late? For fun? No; it would be ditficult to extract any amusement out of that exhaustion. Because they are avari-clous? In many cases no. Because their own personal expenses are lavish? No: a few hundred dollars would meet all their wants. The simple fact is the man is enduring all that fatigue and experation and wear and tear to keep his home prosperous. There is an invisible line reaching from that store, from that bank, from that store fooding to from that shop, from that scaffolding, to a quiet scene a few blocks away, a few miles away, and there is the secret of that business endurance. A SACRIFICING MOTHER.

A SACRIFICING MOTHER. Or perhaps the mother lingers long enough to see a son get on the wrong road, and his former kindness becomes road, and his former kindness becomes rough reply when she expresses ainxigty about him. But she goes right on, looking carefully after his apparel, remembering his every birthday with some memento, and, when he is brought home, worn out with dissipation, nurses him till he gets well and starts him again and home and with dissipation, nurses him till he gets well and starts him again and hopes and expects and prays and counsels and suffers until her strength gives out and she fails. She is going, and attendants, bending over her pillow, ask her if she has any message to leave, and she makes great effort to say something, but out of three or four minutes of indistinct utterance they can catch but three words. "My poor boy!" The simple fact is she died for him. Life for life. Substitution!

About thirty-six years ago there went forth from our northern and southern homes hundreds of thousands of men to do battle for their country. All the poetry of war soon vanished and left them nothing but the terrible prose. They waded knee deep in mud; they slept in snowbanks; they marched till their cut feet tracked the earth; they were swindled out of their honest rations and lived on meat not fit for a dog; they had jaws all fractured, and eyes extinguished, and limbs shot away. Thousands of them cried for water as they lay dying on the field the night after the battle and got it not. They were homestek and received no message from their leved ones. They died in barns, in bushes, in ditches, the buzzards of the summer heat the only attendants on their obsequies. No one but the infinite God, who knows everything knows the ten-thousandth part of the length and breadth and dept and height of the anguish of the northern and squinern battlefields. Why did these fathers leave their children and go to the front, and why did these young men, postponing the marriage day, start out litts the probabilities of never coming back? For the country they died. Life for life. Blood for blood. Substitution!

Blood for blood. Substitution:

CASES OF HEROISM.

But we need not go so far. What is that monument in Greenwood? It is to the doctr se who fell in the southern gaidemics. Why go? Were they not anough sick to be attended in these northern latitudes? Oh. Yes! But the doctor puts a few medical books in his valise and some vials of medicine and leaves his patients here in the hands of other physicians and takes the rail train. Before he gets to the infected regions he passes crowded rail trains, regular and extra, taking the flying and affrighted populations. He arrives in a city over which a great horror is brooding. He goes from couch to couch, feeling of the puise and studying symptoms and prescribing day after day, night after night, until a fellow physicians and then rises and says he must go and look after these patients. He is told to lie down, but he fights his attendants until he falls back and is weaker and weaker and dies for people with whom he had no kinship, and far away from his own family, and is hastily put away in a stranger's tomb, and only the fifth partor of a newspapr line tells us of his sacrifice, his name just mentioned quong five. Yet he has touched the furthest height of sublimity in that three weeks of humanitarian service. He goes straight as an arrow to the beoom of him who said, "I was sick, and ye visited me." Life for life, Blood for blood. Substitution:

He had slain the entire Van Nest family. The foaming wrath of the acommunity in that three weeks of humanitarian service. It goes the same principle of self sacrifice. He had slain the entire Van Nest family. The foaming wrath of the community could be kept off him only by armed constables. Who would volunteer to be his counsel? No attorney wanted to sachis counsel? No attorney wanted to sacrifice his popularity by such an ungrateful task. All were silent, save one, a young lawyer with feeble voice, that could hardly be heard outside the bar, pale and thin and awkard. It was William H. Seward, who saw that the prisoner was idiotic and irresponsible and ought to be put in an asylum rather than put to death, the heroic counsel uttering these beautiful words:

"I speak now in the hearing of a people who have prejudged the prisoner and condemned me for pleading in his behalf.

careworn face of its frown whenever I cross my threshold. The beggar in the street obliges me to give because he says, "God bless you! as I pass. My dog caresses me with fondness if I will but smile on him. My horse recognizes me when I fill his manger. What reward, what gratitude, what sympathy and affection can I expect here? There the prisoner sits. Look at him. Look at the assemblage around you. Listen to their ill suppressed censures and their excited fears and tell me where among my neighbors or my fellow men, where, even in his heart, I can expect to find a sentiment, a thought, not to say of reward or of acknawledgement, or even of recognition? Gentlemen, you may think of this evidence what you flease, bring in what verdict you can, but I asseverate before heaven and you that, to the best of my knowledge and belief, the prisoner at the bar dees not at this moment know why it is that my shadow falls on you instead of his own."

The gallows got its victim, but the post mortem examination of the poor creature showed to all the surgeons and to all the world that the public was wrong, that William H. Seward was right, and that hard, stony step of obloquy in the Auburn court room was the first step of the stairs of fame up which he went to the top, or to within one step of the top, that last denied him through the treachery of cled All the arrows of hell niersed our least of the progress our least of the arrows of hell niersed our cled All the and the battalions of the demoniac, and the myrmidons of darkness. From 12 o'clock at noon to 3 o'clock in the afternoon the greatest battle of the universe went on. Etarnal destinies were being decided. All the arrows of hell pierced our chieftain, and the battleaxes struck him, until brow and check and shoulder and hand and foot were incarnadined with cozing life, but he fought on until he gave a final stroke, and the commander-inchief of hell and all his forces fell back in everlasting ruin, and the victory is ours. And on the mound that celebrates the triumph we plant this day two figures not in bronze or iron or sculptured marble, but two figures of living light, the lion of Judah's tribe, and the lamb that was slain. top, or to within one step of the top, that last denied him through the treachery of American politics. Nothing sublimer was ever seen in an American courtroom than William H. Seward, without reward, standing between the fury of the pepulace and the loathsome imbecile. Substitution!

In the realm of the fine arts there was as remarkable an instance. A brilliant but hypercriticised painter, Joseph William Turner, was met by a volley of abuse from all the art galleries of Europe. His paintings, which have since won the appliance of all civilized nations—"The Fifth Plague of Egypt," "Fisherman on a Lee Shore In Squally Weather." "Calais Pier." "The Sun Rissing Through Mist" and "Dido Building Carthage"—were then targets for critics to shoot at. In defense of this outrageously abused man, a young author of 24 years, just one year out of college, came forth with his pen and wrote the ablest and most famous essays on art that the world ever saw, or ever will see—John Ruskin's "Modern Painters. For seventeen years this author fought the battles of the maltreated artist, and after, in poverty and broken heartedness, the painter had died, and the public tried to undo their cruelties toward him by giving him a big funeral and burial in St. Paul's cathedral, his eld time friend took out of a tin box 19,000 pleces of paper containing drawings by the old painter, and through many weary and uncompensated months assorted and arranged them for public observation. People say John Ruskin in his old days is cross, misanthropic and morbid. What ever he may do that he ought not to do, and whatever he may say that he ought not to say between new and his death, he will leave this world insolvent as far as it has any capacity to pay this author's pen for its chivalric and Christian defense of Cotton Futures. RIORDAN & CO. New York, March 22 .- The Sun's cotton ports and 80 for spinning. The nuctua-tions in prices today were few and unim-portant. The trading, what there was of it, was intensely dull and of a local, pro-fessional character, and at the close What an exalting principle this which se kindles enthusiasm, or awakens eloquence, or chimes poetic canto, or moves nations. The principle is the dominant one in our religion—Christ the martyr, Christ the celestial hero. Christ the defender, Christ the substitute. No new principle, for it was as old as human nature, but now on a grander, wider, higher, deeper and more world resounding scale. The shepherd boy as a champion for Israel with a sling toppled the giant of Phillistine braggadocio in the dust, but here is another David, who, for all the armies of churches millitant and trium, so kindles enthusiasm, or awakens eloit, was intensely dull and of a local, pro-fessional character, and at the close prices were practically unchanged from Saturday's final quotations. Reports of high water continue to be received from the south, and on a small local demand prices here advanced slightly. The buy-ing power was soon exhausted, however, and in the absence of continued support prices reacted and lost most of the im-provement. The fear of serious damage provement. The fear of serious damage by a general overflow checks any desire to sell on a large scale. The spot mark-ets in this country were firm, the receipts were light, and the exports liberal, but the dullness of the speculation is the here is another David, who, for all the armies of churches millitant and triumphant, hurls the Goliath of perdition into defeat, the crash of his brazen armor like an explosion at Hell Gate. Abraham had at God's command agreed to sacrifice his son Isaac, and the same God just in time had provided a ram of the thicket as a substitute, but here is another Isaac bound to the altar, and no hand arrests the sharp edges of laceration and death, and the universe shivers and quakes and recoils and groans at the horror.

Adam a type of Christ because he came directly from God, Noah a type of Christ because he delivered his own family from the deluge, Melchisedec a type of Christ because he had no predecessor or successor, Joseph a type of Christ because he was cast out by his brethren, Moses a type of Christ because he was a deliverer from bondage, Samson a type of Christ because of his strength to slay the lions and carry off the iron gates of impossibility. Solomon a type of Christ in the affluence of his dominion, Jonah a type of Christ because of the stormy sea in which he threw himself for the rescue of others, but put together Adam and Noah and Melchisedec and Joseph and Moses and Josua and Samson and Solomon and Jonah, and they would not make a fragment of Christ, a quarter of a Christ, the half of a Christ or the millionth part of a Christ DID. The Chicago Markets. Chicago, March 22.-The news on wheat today was fairly favorable to prices, but local conditions were opposed to improvement and the latter prevailed. Local operators who were short of wheat early last weak covered on Friday and Saturday, thus removing one of the best supports of the market and moderate offerings demonstrated the under current of weakness. The weakness of wheat and the inability of corn to resist participating therein had the effect of producing a bearish feeling in oats. Trading was fair, but not particularly notable. Cash oats were steady, closing easy.

The provision market held up very well, netwithstanding a lack of strength in the hog market. sympathles have been wrung in behalf of the unfortunate have no appreciation of that one moment which was lifted out of all the ages of eternity as most conspicuous when Christ gathered up all the sins of those to be redeemed under his one arm and all his sorrows under his other arm and said: "I will atone for these under my right arm and will heal all those under my left arm. Strike me with all they glittering shafts, O eternal justice! Roll over me with all thy surges, ye occans of sorrow!" And the thundarboits struck him from above, and the seas of trouble rolled up from beneath, hurricane after hurricane, and cyclone after cyclone, and then and there in presence of heaven and earth and hell—yea, all weelds witnessing—the price, the bitter price, the glorious price. The infinite price, the cternal price, was paid that sets us free.

That is what Paul means, that is what I mean, that is what all those who have ever had their heart changed mean by "Blood." I glory in this religion of blood. I am thrilled as I see the suggestive color in sacramental cup, whether it be of hurnished silver set on cloth immanulately. Southern Cotton Mills. (Baltimore Sun.) Fall River, Mass., March 21 .- The agiation over the proposed reduction in hours of labor for cotton mill employes is strong here at present, both for and against the movement. A statement by Secretary Howard, of the Spinners' Union, that the competition of southern manufacturers would not be increased by the adoption of a shorter working day in this section is met by a declaration of one of the mos prominent manufacturers that in spite f the strong efforts made in New England to improve trade conditions by reduction of stock, the curtailed pronished sliver set on cloth immacuulately white or rough hewn frem wood set on table in leg hut meeting house of the wilderness. Now I am thrilled as I see the altars of ancient sacrafice crimson with the blood of the sigh amb, and Leviticus is to me not se much the Old Testament as the New. Now I see why the destroying angel passing over Egypt in the duction has been more than made up by the new mills and increased production of the south. It is pointed out that in about three and a half years the mills at Fall River have been closed as the New. Now I see why the destroying angel, passing over Egypt in the night, spared all those houses that had blood sprinkled on their doorsteps. Now I know what Isalah means when he speaks of "one in red apparel coming with dyed garments from Bosrah," and whom the Apocalypse medis when it describes a heavenly chieftain whose "vesture was dipped in blood," and what Peter, the apostle, means when he speaks of the "precious blood that cleanseth from all sin," and what the old, worn out, descept missionary Paul means whon, in my text, he cries, "Without shedding of blood is no remission." By that blood you and I will be saved or never saved at all, Glory be to God that the hill back of Jerusalem was the battlefield on which Christ achieved our liberty! about six months on an average. For this sacrifice, it is said, no cor-responding benefit has accrued, but southern competitors have run on full time, and filled up the vacuum which northern manufacturers have been try-ing to create. Fall River owners state that it can be proven beyond question that southern mills producing the same fabrics as those made in this city are realizing satisfactory profits at present market prices. Their taxes are nominal; fuel, in many cases, is less than it costs here, the hours of work range from sixty-six to seventy-two hours weekly, and labor will average 40 per ent. less in price.

In all the history of the states there never was so much nepotism shown as by the recent legislature. Many of the members had their sons and daughters quartered on the state treasury, and even some of the clerks themselves concluded to put their poor kin on the tax-payers of the state.-Statesville Mascot.

all was shoveled under because of the malodor arising in that hot month of June.

"There," said our guide, "the highland regiments lay down on their faces waiting for the moment to spring upon the foe. In that orchard 2,500 men were cut to pleces. Here stood Wellington, with white lips, and up that knoll rode Marshal Ney on his sixth horse, five having been, shot under him. Here the ranks of the Freuch broke, and Marshal Ney, with his boot slashed of a sword, and his hat off, and his face covered with powder and blood, tried to rally his troops as he cried, 'Come and see how a marshal of France dies on the battlefield!' From yonder direction Grouchy was expected for the French re-enforcement, but he came not. Around those woods Blutcher was looked for to re-enforce the English. CASTORIA. Chat H.
