

THE FILIBUSTERS.

TRUE STORY OF THE EXPEDITION FOR CUBA.

The tug Alexander Jones did not go to Cuba but Met and Transferred her Cargo to the Dauntless—Two Loads of War Materials Landed.

The schooner John D. Long, Captain Archie Guthrie, was reported in below at Southport yesterday morning.

The arrival of the Long renews interest in the recent Cuban filibustering expedition out of Wilmington. In this connection, The Messenger is informed by one of the crew of the Alexander Jones that there is no truth in the story that the Jones landed arms on the Cuban coast and was chased and fired on by a Spanish war vessel.

The Messenger's informant gives the true story of the expedition as follows: On Thursday night, May 13th, the Alexander Jones took on a cargo of rifles, machetes, rapid fire guns and ammunition at the wharf of the Wilmington, Newbern and Norfolk railway, in the southern limits of the city.

When she had nearly completed her cargo a watchman, attracted by the crowd on the wharf, started down to see what was the matter. A guard had been put out at the approach to the pier, with a rope stretched across the track, and they had been ordered not to let anybody pass.

Mr. Harris Lane, who has been spending a while in Charlotte, passed through the city yesterday on his way to his home at New Bern. The following, who have been attending the general assembly of Presbyterians which has been in session in Charlotte, came down to Wilmington yesterday: Rev. S. C. Alexander, D. D., of Arkansas; Rev. C. C. Rankin, of Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. L. E. Baston, of Statesville, N. C. They were met and entertained by members of the First Presbyterian church.

Some one having stated that the officers had approached and also that the United States revenue cutter Lot M. Morrill was getting up steam, the Jones pulled out and started down the river, leaving several boxes of material on the wharf. The material had been carried there in two cars. The Jones left the wharf at 10:45 p. m., and in a few hours crossed the bar and anchored at the sea buoy outside.

In the meantime the schooner John D. Long had been loaded with coal and material at the Wilmington and Weldon railroad wharf, in the northern part of the city, and about an hour after the Jones had gone down the river the tug Jacob Brandow, at 11:45 p. m., towed the schooner past the United States revenue cutter Colfax and followed the Jones to sea.

On the schooner were General Nunez and another officer of the Cuban army, a Cuban pilot and Captain John O'Brien, of the famous tug Dauntless. At the sea buoy they went on board the Jones, and Captain O'Brien took charge of the expedition. A hawser was made fast from the Jones to the schooner, and early Friday morning the tug steamed to the south with her tow. The Jacob Brandow returned to Southport.

On the way down the coast no port was entered, but off Palm Beach, on the coast of Florida, sixty-two Cubans were taken on board. The Jones then towed the schooner to the Bahamas and in the vicinity anchored in the open sea on Tuesday, May 18th. On Thursday morning, May 20th, the famous filibuster Dauntless hove in sight and came alongside the Jones and the schooner. She coaled from the schooner, took a cargo of arms from the Jones and, with Captain O'Brien in command, headed for the Cuban coast, about sixty miles away. She left the Jones between 8 and 9 o'clock Thursday night, made a successful landing in Cuba, near Matanzas, and, after an absence of twenty hours exactly, returned to the Jones, took another cargo of war material and started for Cuba Friday night.

On the last trip General Nunez and the sixty-two Cubans left the Jones and went on board the Dauntless and accompanied Captain O'Brien. When the Dauntless got back to the Jones for her second cargo, and Captain O'Brien informed them that he had made a successful trip, they went wild over him, embracing him, shouting "Our O'Brien," "Viva Cuba Libre," etc. When the Dauntless left with her second cargo the Jones coaled from the schooner, towed her off Cape Canaveral, Florida, and turned her loose. She sailed back and got into Southport yesterday morning.

Captain O'Brien is familiarly known as "Dynamite Johnny," and if he was successful in making the second trip from the Jones, as reported, it makes his twelfth successful voyage with war supplies for Cuba. The cargo carried out of here was valued at $78,000, and is said to have been the second largest ever landed in Cuba. While in Wilmington General Nunez was at The Orton incognito.

Pulmonary consumption, in its early stages, may be checked by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It stops the distressing cough, soothes irritation of the throat and lungs, and induces much-needed repose. Hundreds have testified to the remarkable virtues of this preparation.

Editors of Wilmington Messenger: Allow me, through your widely read columns, to answer numerous seekers and inquirers for the following information:

1. The Mechanics' Home Association is now in its ninth year.

2. It has issued thirteen series of stock; the first series of 1,000 shares and the subsequent series of 500 shares each.

3. Three series have attained their par value of $100 a share, and been paid to their stockholders, earning for them over 12 per cent per annum, and another series (the fourth) will mature and be paid out in July, leaving nine series in force.

4. The association will open a new series of stock (No. 14) commencing its first payment on the first Saturday in July. Due notice of this series will be advertised in The Messenger.

5. As all the money of the Mechanics' Home Association is loaned on mortgages secured by real estate in this city, and in each instance worth a great deal more than the amount loaned, it will at once be seen that there can be no doubts in the minds of investors that its stock is the safest as well as the most profitable security any one can desire. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

President Chadbourne's Annual Report. The Great Work Accomplished for Wilmington by This Body.

The Messenger thanks Mr. James H. Chadbourne, Jr., president of the Wilmington chamber of commerce, for a printed copy of his annual report. It embraces twenty-four pages of matter and is a readable sketch of the most important matters considered by the chamber during the year ending March 4th. It does President Chadbourne credit, and as it will be sent abroad it will be another means of advertising Wilmington.

If our people have no conception of the great work the chamber of commerce is doing for Wilmington their eyes will be opened when they read President Chadbourne's recapitulation of the achievements of the chamber during the brief space of one year. Here it is:

During the year the chamber has had a net gain of $2,400,000 and 8 honorary members, and has held thirty meetings.

We succeeded in inducing the Standard Oil Company to make Wilmington an oil tank steamer station for supplying oil in bulk to North Carolina, South Carolina and portions of Georgia.

We secured the establishment of harbor lines on our river front.

We secured an appropriation of $70,000 for a light house on the pitch of Cape Fear river.

We secured a reduction of 25 per cent. in pilotage on coastwise vessels, a measure of incalculable benefit to our port.

We have published a book in memoriam of Wilmington's most distinguished citizen, the Hon. George Davis.

We have had printed lithograph maps of our river and bar, showing the depth and width of the channel from here to the sea and the depth of water on the bar, showing our summer resorts, our railroad advantages, and the resources of this vicinity for truck farming.

We secured the encampment of the state guard at Wrightsville last summer.

The chamber was successful in its efforts to bring the cruiser Raleigh to Southport to receive a testimonial from North Carolinians in North Carolina waters.

Through the efforts of our body, work on the government improvement of our river and bar is continued on a plan providing a channel 150 feet wide and 29 feet deep at mean low water from Wilmington to the ocean.

We have prepared and issued a book advertising the resources and advantages of Wilmington and New Hanover county.

We have renewed our charter, making its term perpetual.

We have taken steps to advertise Wilmington at the Tennessee centennial exposition to be held at Nashville.

We secured the annual meeting of the North Carolina Chamber of Commerce in Wilmington last summer.

Through our efforts the board of aldermen adopted an ordinance regulating the erection of buildings within the fire limits and along the wharves.

Largely through our efforts the Southern Baptist convention will meet here in May, bringing several thousands of strangers to our city.

It is a fortunate day for a man when he first discovers the value of Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a blood-purifier. With this medicine, he knows he has found a remedy upon which he may rely, and that his life-long malady is at last conquered. Has cured others, will cure you.

How Literature Influences Soldiers. Literature was certainly one of the most powerful factors in every walk of life. They of the army could not possibly hope to become efficient in their profession but for the fact that through the medium of literature they were able to study the great campaigns of the past and to learn the lessons in strategy and tactics taught them by the celebrated exponents of the art of war. A successful commander ought to be able to act by intuition; but golden opportunities in the field were always fleeting, and to enable a man to take advantage of these opportunities and to make the best use of them he must prepare himself beforehand by constant study. Then would he act as that happy warrior who, in the words of Wordsworth:

"Through the heat of conflict keeps the law In calmness made, and sees what he foresaw."

They all know how Wellington and Napoleon zealously studied the campaigns of Alexander, Hannibal and Caesar; how men like Lee, Grant and Moltke imbibed the great lessons left by the two distinguished commanders of the opposing forces on the field of Waterloo, and he remembered being struck in reading a passage in the life of Sir Charles Napier where he described how, at a certain juncture of the battle of Assaye, near Hindarabad, it had flashed across him how Marlborough had acted at Blenheim in similar circumstances.—General Lord Roberts.

Our "Flowers" Never Die.

It was with pleasure that we received the following letter from an esteemed friend and subscriber, and one that is well known here and has friends by the score. Frank's friends will be glad to know that he is doing well at his adopted home and that he is now vice president of the Washita Lumber Company. It is hard to keep a Wilmington boy down, especially when he possesses such qualities, both of mind and heart, as he. He writes as follows: Seattle, Wash., May 22.

Gentlemen: You have added appreciably to the reputation of Wilmington as a public spirited and progressive community by your recent editions of The Messenger during the Southern Baptist convention.

It was a great achievement from a modest point of view, and I think a pardonable pride in showing them to friends of mine here, all of whom have expressed themselves in unstinted praise of your work. I was glad to see, too, that the old town sustained her reputation for hospitality—a reputation well deserved and of which her people may well be proud, for it extends even to the Pacific coast. Of all the people I have met with who at some time have visited Wilmington there are none who did not speak well of her people. This is, indeed, gratifying to me, who have been in the past and loves her as I do. Wishing you continued success, believe me, Yours truly, F. L. MEARES.

[Orange County (Fla.), Citizen.] The Citizen man returned this week from a trip to Wilmington, N. C., where he has been in attendance on the Southern Baptist convention. The Messenger placed the entire convention under obligation to itself for its full and accurate reports of the meetings.

[Fair Bluff Times.] In writing up the Southern Baptist convention in the last issue of The Times we omitted, unintentionally, to refer to the fact that The Wilmington Messenger distributed in the small measure to the interests of the great convention and the pleasure and profit of the delegates. The editor of this paper has been attending this convention for many years, and we speak dispassionately in making the statement that no daily paper in any of the larger cities ever made a more splendid record of the proceedings than did The Messenger during the late convention. We are going to file away our copies of The Messenger convention series as a souvenir of the past. It will do to read in coming years when we wish to refer to the sweet and blessed experience of the away that are past and gone. The Messenger deserves the patronage of all the good people in the state and nation.

[The New Era.] Messrs. Jackson & Bell, Proprietors of the Messenger, crowned themselves with glory by showing to the world that they are real, live newspaper men and have a home pride that is a real treat to the town, as well as to the Baptists of the southern states.

The extra cuts and advertising matter given Wilmington by The Messenger will be worth alone much more to our city than the entire cost of the convention to us. We have no doubt that lasting good will come to our city from The Messenger's extra work, for its praise was on the lips of the thousand visitors—the highest compliment that can be paid to any paper.

A Beautiful Wedding. (Correspondence of The Messenger.) Hub, N. C., May 29.

Married, May 26th, at Colonel Brewer's residence, in Hub, N. C., by Rev. P. C. Morton, Mr. Herbert L. Spencer, of Hub, to Miss Hattie Bartonshaw, of Michigan.

There was a bright gathering of friends, and the bride and groom stood under a bell and bower of evergreens. The bride was indeed lovely, and in the presence of devoted friends the couple were made one.

Mrs. Brewer's handsome parlors were brilliantly lighted, and after a feast of reason and a flow of soul all sat down to a delightful collation, after which, with music, all went merry as a marriage bell.

The groom is an energetic, thriving young man, and the bride is much admired and beloved by many friends. They settle down in a lovely home.

A Pleasant Day.

Thursday, May 20th, was the day appointed for Gay's Chapel Sunday school picnic. It was my good fortune to attend, and I wish to bear witness to the pleasure and enjoyment of the occasion.

In company with a merry party of Wilmingtonians we went to Little Ed. Mr. Butters' staunch steam launch, and with a loaded yawl in tow we steamed up the Cape Fear to Navassa, then turned down Brunswick river for several miles and then wound our way up Sturgeon creek for quite a distance. The morning was delightful, the party in fine spirits, and with song, jest and laughter the hour of our ride passed quickly. At an old mill site we landed to find quite a gathering of hospitable people, who soon taught us to know them as friends. After some time spent in the simple but real pleasures of a country outing, we were called together by Mr. S. L. Penny, the clever and efficient superintendent of the school. Mr. Gay, secretary, read a programme, and a number of bright boys and girls, under the guidance of Miss West, their teacher, gave us a number of well arranged and nicely delivered speeches, dialogues, recitations and songs. To give the programme in full would require too much space; to mention some, where all did so well, would be unfair; therefore, I shall simply say that the exercises were indeed good and every one who took part deserves great praise.

This school has been organized but a few months, yet it is a credit to our Methodist brethren, and especially to Brother Penny and his earnest co-laborers.

The Baptist school from Myrtle Plain was invited to join in this picnic, and Rev. Mr. White, the superintendent, and several of his workers were present. When the exercises were finished dinner was spread, and such a dinner. This scribe has never had any special reputation in the eating line, but he established one that day. Everything May the Gay's Chapel school have in abundance, and as I ate up one side of the long table and down the other I know whereof I affirm when I declare that all was good. A treat of confectionery was given to the children during the afternoon. It was wonderful to see how many of our crowd suddenly considered themselves children. Well, that candy was nice, and I was just boy enough to enjoy it as much as the other youngsters.

A safe and delightful ride back with Captain Butters ended the day, which we shall long remember with pleasure. May the Gay's Chapel school have a long and happy existence, and may God's rich blessing abide with the faithful Christians who are doing such effective work in that community. In just such undertakings is a field where in our city schools can render great assistance.

WILL B. OLIVER.

Ian Maclarin Likes Americans. (The Outlook.)

Hospitality is also of the essence of courtesy, and every visitor to the states agrees with his neighbor—however he may differ about other things—that the American has revived the ancient Eastern idea and acclimated it in the west. After a journey in the New World one returns home convinced that we do not know how hospitality spells in Europe, and smitten to the heart with repentance. When a stranger comes to us with a letter, we receive him with calm civility; hope that he has had a good passage, inquire what he wishes to see in our country, map out his route for him, ask him to a meal and let him go with a modest disclaimer that he has given us any trouble. If one of us goes over to America, not knowing half a dozen people on the whole continent, letters of hospitality arrive before we start; they are brought on board your steamer with the pilot, they are delivered on the landing stage, they are lying on the table at your rooms, and they all come to the same thing—that you stay in a hotel at your peril, and that you and your belongings—it is hoped two boys may be with you as well as your wife—must come at once to the writer's house.

If you have an iron will and profound conviction that your arrangements prevent your being a proper guest—for a guest has his duties as well as a host—you will deny yourself the pleasure of private hospitality, but you will have to fight your way, so to say, to the hotel. And if you are a guest you will be received at the station—we allow our visitors to make their own way to the houses—and welcomed by the whole family as if you were of the same blood, or at least friends of twenty years' standing; and you will be driven over the whole district, and your host will be at your disposal as if he had nothing to do—yet judges, university men, merchants and editors have some engagements, and you will depart laden with roses and good will.

One is not quite sure whether to admire most of all the grace or tact or spontaneity or completeness of hospitality among our kinsfolk; but that for which one is most grateful, and which counts dearest, is the genuine kindness. The Americans are a kind people and they are not ashamed to allow it to be seen.

What lends a peculiar character to American manners is their genuine and attractive simplicity; and the traveler does feel that his ideal of democratic citizenship has been in one particular, at least, realized. In one way it strikes the foreigner that the states lose by not having a leisured ruling class, with traditions of public service, of incorruptible honor, of trained statesmanship. In another way the states may gain by counting all their citizens eligible for public duty, because the rulers are not a caste, do not give themselves airs, are affable and accessible.
