WILMINGTON, N. C. TUESDAY, JUNE 15, 1897.

THE NEGRO AS A COTTON MILL WORKER.

The north is about catching at a stride. One cotton mill in Charleston, S. C., is about to try the negro as a hand or operative. At once northern papers begin to discuss "the new problem in the south."

The negro cannot work for much less than the whites work for and may not prove so efficient. The north expects labor troubles to come out of it.

"If the experiment now proposed proves to be successful, will not the general employment of negro factory labor, so far as practicable, become necessary through competition?"

The New York paper does not understand the situation. In the south negroes work right along side of whites. The negroes have been long discovered by the knowing ones in the north.

There is nothing of a rival of the north with greater opportunities and advantages. The reason that white labor is lacking or may be lacking hereafter is the low wages, and the more remote question but important, the minimization of pauperism and the decrease of crime.

Instead of seeking to accomplish the impossible task of shutting out the negro, the northern workman should aim to teach him that his labor is worth as much as the white man's under similar conditions.

It comes from a city where negroes are not in demand in a calling in connection with whites. There is not a negro workman in New York who labors in the same mill or workshop or printing office side by side with the whites.

The republican old high tax organ tells the south what it must do in the changed conditions—that to avoid riots it must put negroes in cotton mills for the negroes "will not be ignored." Bosh and tomfoolery!

"The fears of our contemporary as to the effect of this shipment of the cotton manufacturing industry in the south generally are wholly without foundation. There is no desire or disposition anywhere in the south to substitute colored operatives for white."

"We do not know, but we suspect that the needed white labor could be easily obtained if the Charleston owners would pay better wages—as good as those at Fall River, Mass. They may life-sustaining wages in the south and we cannot doubt all the white labor desired will be forthcoming."

The north would be glad possibly to see negro labor substituted in all southern cotton mills—labor that even New England millers have pronounced good, efficient as well as cheap—because the south finally will make all the higher classes of goods that are the most remunerative.

"It is demonstrated that the colored operatives in the Charleston mill cannot acquire sufficient skill to make fine goods, this mill will have to confine its work to coarse goods. If the experiment with colored labor here should fail, that will be the end of the matter, and also the end of the mill. If it should succeed, it will inevitably bring the cotton manufacturing industry of the United States to the cotton growing states, where it naturally belongs.

In many sections and in many mills in the south the pay is said to be very low for capable white labor. Consider this in considering a change of labor.

HOME POLKS.

The New Bern people are aroused and leave the mark of it. But what a blight bad politics shed upon all they touch. Unless the people rise up and rescue this very important school from the cruel clutches of the Russell freeze-out gang it will be doomed to decay.

The election to be held in August as to voting $500 for education in the school districts is being discussed in the weekly press. This is right. It is very important, and will do good if the people vote wisely and the money is properly expended.

Some people think that the fine Sunday edition of the Messenger contains a good deal of what is known as plate matter—matter prepared in the north and put in stereotyped columns—but it is all set in our office upon our linotype machines. The discriminating reader is getting now a great deal of very carefully selected matter from best sources in addition to the original.

"No," grunted the Indian; "Injun no lost, wigwag lost." "Hello," said the white man, "Indian lost?"

The southern democratic protection robbers growl over the discrimination against the south in as much as the tax is less for protecting the south's interest.

The British papers comment on McKinley's floundering talk to prosperity in this country. For instance The London Pall Mall Gazette says, in a long editorial on the business and political outlook in America, that no one but the most optimistic American can see anything satisfactory or hopeful in either.

The republicans are forgetting first principles. They are now caucusing over annexing Hawaii. Then Cuba will come to be followed by Canada and isles of the sea, and then comes the foreign complications, greater armies and navy, more taxes, a disintegrated country and the Man on Horseback.

The people are too credulous and careless in selecting candidates for office. Could open-mouthed protection be elected to the United States senate from southern states, except Louisiana? How then, but from concealed views, and carelessness in selection, have southern states sent eight protectionists in disguise to the senate?

It is not surprising that Senator McKinley of Louisiana, declares squarely that I will sell cheap. I have it at all prices from 15c per yard to $1.25; in Stamped Linen, Bourne Scarfs also.
