THE CUBAN QUESTION.

Our Government Not Yet Decided Upon the Course to Pursue—No First Give Matter Thorough Study. Washington, June 19.—It can be stated on the best authority that all publications purporting to outline the Cuban policy of President McKinley that have been made up to the present time have been in disregard of the fact that up to this moment the case of the United States government has not yet been made up, and that even in the discussions of the subject of our relations to Cuba that have taken place in the cabinet circle, the point has not yet been reached where it could be said that the executive had finally determined upon any certain plan of action.

There is felt to be no urgency, and official intention has been given, so far as possible, the present special session of congress would be devoted to the tariff. Moreover, the personnel of the senate is such that it is not likely that any treaty will be passed until at least reasonable assurances are given that a majority of the upper branch of congress stands ready to ratify the instrument. It is understood that the initiative in the present case will be taken by this government.

ANOTHER ARBITRATION TREATY

President McKinley Turns His Attention to the Drafting and Negotiating a New Arbitration With England. Washington, June 19.—President McKinley has determined to revive the abandoned treaty of general arbitration between the United States and Great Britain. He has already turned his attention to the subject, and under the direction of Secretary Sherman the matter has progressed to the extent that the new treaty already has been drafted to serve as the basis of negotiations. The president always has been an advocate of the settlement of international disputes by arbitration, and though disappointed in the rejection of the arbitration treaty, he never has abandoned hope of securing the adoption of such a treaty.

The failure of the former treaty by the action of the senate left the subject in such condition that the British government did not feel disposed to renew negotiations unless first invited by the United States. Under the circumstances, the subject would have lapsed had not officials at Washington who were deeply impressed with the far reaching character of an alliance between the United States and Great Britain, taken up the question where the senate left it and set about devising means to overcome the objections of the senate.

Robinson then barricaded himself in his cabin and swore he would kill anyone who attempted to enter. A sheriff's posse set fire to the cabin and smoked him out, and in the pursuit that followed Robinson was shot three times. He was taken to the hospital and his wounds are not necessarily fatal.

"DR. MILES, Through His Nervine Is a Benefactor to Thousands." WILMINGTON, Wis., June 19, 1897. I have been suffering from nervous prostration for several years. I could not rest at night on account of sleeplessness. My attention was called to Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, and I commenced to use it with the very best effect. Since then I have kept a bottle in my house and use it whenever my nerves become unstrung, with always the same good results. My son also takes it for nervousness with like never failing success. I have recommended it to many and it cures them. All who suffer from nervous prostration should try it. It is free from narcotics, perfectly harmless, and yet soothing and strengthening.
