assaulting a white woman, furnish impressive lessons alike to the north and the South as to the growth of mob law While felonious assaults upon women n nearly or quite all the Southern States are punished by death, in the Northern States it is not a capital offence, but there is even greater excuse for mob violence in the South than in the North. These assaults negroes, and in the South, with its sparse settlements, the unprotected condition of families, and the immense proportion of colored population, it re-punishment for such offenses. True if the law is allowed to take its course in the South, the punishment for such a crime is death, but the penalties of ring the ignorant and brutal class of negroes who commit these offenses, while the mastery of mob law does in some measure terrify and restrain

It should be remembered, also, that the increase of mob law during the last few years is not so much the natural outgrowth of lawless violence as it is the result of the alarming increase of felonious assaults upon women by brutal negroes. While slavery existed in this country such assaults were extremely rare, indeed, almost unknown either North or South, but today there is hardly a week that does not record the execution by mob law of some such criminal. It is the increase of this terrible crime that has logically increased the mastery of mob law, and it is well to consider and look squarely

It is the duty of every good citizen to demand that the law shall be maintained under all circumstances, and the North and South, has maintained f with great fidelity, but it must now be evident to all who intelligently and dispassionately consider the subject, that the increse of this fearful crim must so impress the public generally that when it is committed in any community however intelligent, peaceful and law abiding, it is with the greatest difficulty that the mastery of the law can be maintained. Two exhibitions of lynch law in Ohio and Maryland within a week conclusively establish the fact that there is no community in the north that can now be trusted to successfully resist mob law in cases of such felonious assaults upon women Mob law is growing solely because the crime for which the law seems to as it is. Mob law must be restrained because if once established for one

Yesterday was 'Methodist' day at Carolina Beach, and the steamer Wilmington carried down about six hundred of them on her 9:30 a. m., 3 p. m. and 5:15 p. m. trips. The occasion was the annual excursion of the Sunday school of Grace M. E. church, and a happy crowd of children and their parents and grown friends took in the trip. They had a fine day for it, and the surf was full of them all day. Four hundred went down on the first boat, and carried their baskets full of good things and took their dinner on the beach and at the pavilion. Ice cream and cold drinks were also served, and there was a pleasant time generally for all who went down. The steamer was crowded when she got back to the city last night about 8 o'clock.

tany, where the bride is usually dressed in crimson brocade. It was Marv Stuart who first changed the color of bridal garments. At her marriage with Francis II, of France, in 1553-which took place not before the altar, but before the great doors of Notre Dameshe was gowend in white brocade, with a train of pale blue Persian velvet, six yards in length. This innovation caused quite a stir in the fashionable world of that time. It was not, however, till quite the end of the seventeenth century that pure white-the color hitherto worn by royal French widows-became popular for bridal garments in England.-Boston Budget.
