TRIAL OF ALLEN HAIRSTON.

The largest crowd of people ever in Greensboro court house assembled yesterday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, to hear the trial of Hairston, colored, for the murder of Charles Blacknall, colored, before Justices Eccle, Pritchett and Balsley.

Messrs. James E. Boyd, John A. Barringer and Col. James Morehead, represented the State, and Messrs. Dillard, King & Dillard, defended.

Austin Hall was the first witness. He stated that he came up to Hairston's store, after he had eaten his dinner and asked Hairston for a match. Hairston went into the store and returned with one in a few moments. Charles Blacknall was in front of the store, in his wagon, when he (Hall) came up. After a good deal of joking between Hairston and the witness Hairston took a pistol from his pocket and fired at Blacknall. Blacknall turned on one side, and after saying something got in his wagon and drove off. Hall said that not a word passed between them (Blacknall and Hairston) prior to the shoot-

Dr. C. M. Glenn was then called. He described the wound, and said that on Tuesday morning, while he was examining the wound Blacknall asked him if he thought he (Blacknall) would die. The Doctor told him that the chances were against him. Soon after Blacknall asked him why some one did not come and take his dyiny testimony. The Doctor replied that he did not know. Then Charles asked him if he (the witness) would not do it. He replied, yes, and Blacknall told his story.

The State wished Dr. Glenn to give Blacknalls' statement, but the defence objected, on the ground that it was not testimony given when the man knew himself to be dying.

A discussion sprang up between counsel, but the objection was recognized by the court as well taken. Whereupon, the counsel for the State declared they did not wish to examine other witnesses till the case was brought up in the Superior Court.

The defence made the point that the defendant had accidentally shot Blacknall; that he did not know that the pistol was loaded; and that if he must be bound over that it must be for manslaughter and not for murder.

The prosecution protested, and a lively, discussion ensued.

The Court thought that the evidence justified it in binding the prisoner over for murder, and so bail was denied.

Hairston was returned .to jail and the large crowd dispersed in an orderly manner.

The Superior Court will convene in June next, when the case will be

About English Walnuts.

EDITOR MORNING NEWS:-If you, or any of your readers, can give me any information as to the culture and growth of English walnuts, in Guilford county, or any part of this State, I shall esteem it a favor. Are there any English walnut trees growing here, and if so, where? Do they bear fruit? Can they be successfully raised from seed, and how many years' growth is required before they ENQUIRER.

The English walnut, as its name indicates. flourishes in England, which lies almost wholly between the 50th and 55th degrees of latitude, while we here in Greensboro are about on the 36th degree.

It also flourishes in Northern Germany, which lies between the 37th and 55th degrees, but Germany has a much colder climate than England, because she lies inland and England is almost surrounded with water, D. C.

While she has not so much sunshine as Germany, she is much more humid, consequently less frosty.

The English walnut thrives in a wide extent of country, and grows right here in Greensboro. A tree may be seen any day on the premises of the late D. Curtis, near Robert M. Douglass'. A bearing one is on the premises of Madison Ward, the fruit raiser, who lives east of town. Mr. Henry Rust, about two miles from town, has a six-year-old tree. But we presume others, in different parts of the country, are propagating English walnut trees.

They are propagated best from the nuts, but can be transplanted. Young trees can be had of some of our nurserymen, who will very cheerfully instruct their customers in the mode of propagation. But our young friend who handed in the above note will find himself along in years before he can eat the fruit from a nut planted next fall-say from ten to fourteen years.
