MISS PALMS IN COURT.

The Woman Senator Jones Loves Contesting Her Father's $7,000,000 Will.

DETROIT, Mich., March 28.-Judge Thomas F. Cooley appeared in the Wayne Circuit Court Saturday as counsel for Miss Clotilde Palms, daughter and joint heir with her bro-ther, Francis F. Palms, of the estate of the late Francis Palms. The latter left property valued at about $7,000,-000 to his two children. The will provides for a trust to be held until maturity is obtained by the children | head. for either heir. This is as near as the testator could come to entailing his vast possessions, and the lawyers say that this will not stand the test of our laws. A provision in the will disin-herited either heir who should contest the will, on its face, therefore this case is merely a friendly discussion on the part of counsel to settle

A Crisis at Hand.

ST. John, N. B., March 28th.-New Brunswick is now tace to face with the greatest financial crisis in its history, and one which will have most disastrous effects in the lumber and shipping interests. The failure of the Maritime Bank and of the great lumber firms of the Stewarts; Guy Beven & Co., and George McLeod, is only a premonition of what is coming. There was more than $1,500,-000 in deposit in the Maritime Bank and the private bank of McClellan & Co. All this has been swept away, and it is only a question of days when a great many business firms, both large and small, must go under,

American Machinery in Italy

WASHINGTON, March 28 .- The Department of State has received information from the Consul at Milan, Italy, that there will be held in that city in the months of May and June next, an international exhibition of flour milling machinery and apparatus connected with lead-making, Italian paste making, rice dressing and similar industries, The Consul advises American manufacturers to send exhibits. He states that American machinery generally enjoys a high reputation. That hydraulic wheels and turbines and windmills are well and favorably known among the educated specialties, both for excellence and comparative cheapness, and believes they would find a good market in Italy. He also believes this to be true of other articles in our exhibition list. The Consul also says that the committee have authorized him to say that articles destined for the exhibition of the United States will be received even after the opening of the exhibinion. He gives the following address for the intended exhibitions:

An Interesting Case.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., March 28 .- A case of quo-warranto involving the right to the office of Register of Deeds, the fees of which amount to about three thousand dollars per annum, has to-day attracted a large and eager crowd and has for several months awakened a deep public interest. A Democrat, J. R. Patterson, is the present incumbent and the relator is Robert Cole, a Republican, elected at the last election and failed to file a bond on the day directed by the statute. Learned argument was made by Maj. W. H. Malone for the relator, and by Capt. M. E. Carter for defendant. His Honor, Judge Graves, has decided in favor of the defendant, and relator appeals.

Thanks.

Editor Morning News :- Allow us, through the MORNING NEWS, to tender our many thanks to friends and others for kindly assisting us in saving our property this morning. Several col-ored men acted well, and did all they could. Without the aid of both white and colored, much of our property would have been destroyed by fire, As it was, we had "a close call." The fire company did good service, and are to be commended for prompt action. Respectfully,

ABOUT THAT TICKET.

GREENSEORO, March 29.

Editor Morning News :- I wonder physicians went yesterday to Madison how many persons it took to write the letter signed South Elm, which appeared in your issue of this morning. Did South Elm de it all himself or did he get some person or persons to help him?

It is really a curious communication, commencing in the plural number, and in a manner that reminds consists of a blind woman sixty years one of the three pretentious tailors of Tooley street, who alluded to themselves as "we the people of Eng-

South Elm says: "Now that we have voted to issue the bonds it behooves us to select and elect a Mayor and Board of commissioners," etc., and later, dropping the plural num-ber he says: "Believing the following gentlemen would command confidence I submit their names," and then follows a full ticket. Now, sir, your correspondent, South Elm, evidently believes also in taking time by the fore-lock. He is not going to get left, if he can help it, by airing nis opinions at an early date, and his modesty will never kill him. Why could he not be satisfied to submit the names of gentlemen as candidates for Mayor and the commissioners of the ward in which he resides Does he want to run the whole city? 'Tis true, the gentlemen named are all very eligible. Doubtless, if elected, they would serve the city honesty and efficiently, and in a certain sense they are representative men; but whom do they represent? There are three lawyers, so that the legal profession is both fully and ably rep-resented, and one of the gentlemen would, from his connection with the R. & D. railroad company, be able to take care of its interest. The capitalist or monetary interests would get a representative. The merchants would have half a dozen, and the whole Board would represent property owners, but the manufacturers would only get one. Just think of it! The manufacturing interests, so important to the building up of the city, would get less representation on the Board than the legal fraternity!!! and then, the artisan and laborer are left out in the cold. Surely, in the increased number of commissioners one or two might be working men, who can be said to fairly represent labor, and as, in this City says he has severed his connection named may be considered as representing the colored voters.

How Literary Men Die. Literary men, as a rule, die nobly. They seem to meet death with philosophical quietude, as did the great Victor Hugo not long ago. Rousseau, it is said, when dying ordered his attendants to place him before the window, that he might once more behold the setting sun, and take his farewell of earth. Petrarch was found dead in his library, with his head upon a book. We are not told that that book was a Bible. Barthelemy was reading Horace, we are informed, when, his hand becoming cold, he dropped the book, his head inclined to one side, and he seemed only to sleep. 'His nephew. however, discovered that he was dead. Bayle expired while correcting the proofsheets of his dictionary. Waller died repeating some lines of Virgil. Although taken away in the "midst of life," Keats' end did not come so suddenly. When near death he was asked by a friend how he felt. "Better, my friend," said he, "I feel the dasies growing over me." Disraeli, too, describes Sir Thomas More's execution. "Sir Thomas," says he, "did not forego his love of jest, even when mounting the scaffold." The stout-hearted knight, it appears, disturbed the oppressive solemnity of the scene by exclaiming, "I pray you see me safe up, and for my coming down let me shift for myself."

How Heaven Interfered.

Sir Francis Hastings Doyle put the following good story into his lately published book of reminiscences: "James Allan Park was a worthy old judge, a believer in special providences, and extremely eccentric. He was in the habit of talking aloud to himself without knowing it. In one case that came before him the prisoner was accused of stealing some fagots, and Park, on the bench, was heard to mutter something to this effect, that he did not quite see his way to a verdict, one fagot being as like another fagot as one egg is like another egg. The quick-eared barrister retained for the defense caught these mutterings from above, and instantly made use of them. "Now, witness," he cried out, "you swear to those fagots; how dare you do such a thing? Is not one fagot as like another fagot as one egg is like an-other egg?" Immediately the judge, who, though a good man, had certainly no claim to be an angel, rushed in without any proper apprehensions. "Stop the case," he shouted, "stop it at once; the coincidence is quite miraculous. I vow to God that very same thought in the very same words passed through my mind only a few seconds ago. Heaven has interfered to shield an innocent man. Gentlemen of the jury, you will acquit the pris-

Manna.

Sicily is the chief source of manna; in that country the trees are cultivated in plantations, and when about eight years old they begin to yield. Cuts an inch and a half long are made in the bark, cutting through to the wood. One cut is made daily, beginning near the bottom of the trunk, with each succeeding cut about an inch above the former one. The thick, syrup-like juice exudes from the cuts and hardens on the bark into white spongy flakes, which when hard enough are removed and dried still further before they are packed for commerce. The World's Way.

At Haroun's Court it chanced upon a time. An Arab poet made this pleasant rhyme:

The new moon is a horseshoe, wrought of Wherewith the Sultan's stallion shall be shod."

On bearing this, his Highness smiled and gave. The man a gold piece. Sing again, O slave!

Above his lute the happy singer bent, And turned another graceful compilin

And, as before, the smiling Sultan gave The man a shekah. Sing again, O save!

Again the verse came, fluent as a rill That wanders, silver-footed, down a hill.

The Sultan, listening, nodded as before, Still gave the gold, and still demanded more

The nimble fancy that had climbed so high, Grew weary with its climbing by-and-by. Strange discords rose, the sense went quite amiss, The singer's rhymes refused to meet and kiss. Invention flagged, the lute had got unstrung And twice he sang the song already sung. The Sultan, furious, called a mute and said: "O, Musta, straightway whip me off his head.

Convulsions in Children.

Convulsions are very alarming to persons who are not accustomed to them. They are rarely fatal, and with an adult the principal thing to be done is to prevent the sufferer from hurting himself. Any smooth object can be put between the teeth to avoid the tongue being bitten. The handle of a toothbrush or of a spoon, a paper-knife or anything of a like nature that is at hand. The clothes should be unfastened, particularly any bands confining the waist, and the sufferer laid down. If the hands are thrown about they should be held. When the fit is over the person must be put to bed and kept quiet for a time. Babies sometimes have convulsious when teething, or from some derangement of the digestion. If the fit lasts for more than a moment the child should be undressed. wrapped in a blanket and put i warm bath to relax the muscles, the head being covered with a cloth wrung out of cold water. The doctor will lance the swollen gums or prescribe a course of diet which will prevent a recurrence of the attack. It is generally not as alarming as it seems to the mother, but a physician should be consulted to discover and, if possible, remove the cause.—Elizabeth Robinson Scovil, in Good Housekeeping.

The Origin of "Hearts."

"Talking of 'Hearts,' " said Police Clerk Dolan, "I'll tell you how that game originated. I have heard some people speak of it as an old game which has been resuscitated within the past few years, but I happen to know that the game was invented by certain members of the Queen City Rowing club about five years ago. Before that time I don't believe anyone ever heard of it, to say nothing of ever playing it. In those palmy days of the club there was organized a branch society, known as the 'Sons of Rest,' or the 'Idle Sons of Labor,' I forget which it was. The society was formed for the benefit and enjoyment of those members of the club who were unemployed in the winter. At one time the sub-society numbered as many as fourteen members. To be eligible for admission one had to be out of work for at least two weeks. They had all the benefits of the parent club, but were not obliged to pay dues. They made these up partly by taking care of the club-rooms, which were then in the Arcade. Well, we used to play a good deal of poker and one thing or another up there, and one night one of the boys suggested what a nice thing it would be to invent some game where one suit would always be trumps. It would then be so much easier to work the cold deck racket on one of the more verdant members. The game was thereupon invented, and hearts were selected as the trump suit. Afterward the idea of making them trumps was abandoned, and the game took its present form. I claim, therefore, that the Queen Citys are entitled to the credit of inventing this really interesting addition to the long list of card games, and one that has of late become the fashion, as they say .- Buffalo Courier.

A Maine man, while chopping wood, cut a big gash in his boot. Thinking he had cut a gash in his foot also, he sat down and shouted for help. Assistance came, and the man, who was not able to walk, was placed on a sled and hauled home. When he got there his boot and stocking were cut from his foot, when it was found that the foot was not cut enough to draw blood.
