A Legislative Swindler.

LANSING, Mich., April 26.-The trial of Milo H. Dakin, representative from Saginaw in the Legislature, will take place in the House of Representatives to-morrow, on the charge of having solicited money from Mayor Shackelton, of Saginaw, and others, ostensibly for corrupting votes in the Legislature, but really for the purpose of converting it to his own uses. There are four counts in the allegations. The House will act as a jury, with the Speaker presiding in the dual capacity of judge and foreman. Representatives Chap-man, Godrich, Snow, Pierce and Thomson will act as prosecutors; United States Commissioner Dodge and Judge Holden will conduct the defense. If found guilty on either count Dakin will be expelled.

Dakin was summoned before the Speaker of the House April 29, having been charged by Mr. Eaton, of Saginaw, with showing a list of members of the House with the alleged prices of their votes attached, in case they voted to carry through Eaton's measure for the revision of the charter of Saginaw. Mr. Dakin acknowledged the list, but said he had not consulted the members.

A Curious Case.

NEW YORK, April 26.-Katie Fisher, a 16 year-old girl was found about 5 o'clock this morning, clinging to a spike at the pier head, at foot of East 28th Street. Capt. W. Fowler, of the Barge Governor Tilden relieved the girl. She said that last night about 9 o'clock, on coming from work she had been enticed into the pier by two unknown men, who after attempting to assault her, and on her resistance, threw her into the water, where she had remained all night, clinging to the spike, where she was found the next morning. The girl was taken home, evidently not much the worse for her immersion. The police will investigate.

OUR ALBANY LETTER.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 26, '87.

As to curious legacies I do not think they are so frequent as in the 17th and 18th centuries.

When an American first arrives in London, he is shocked to see children on the streets dressed in such grotesque style, that it seems as if some one had rigged them out to be made a mark for derision, but soon he learns that they are charity children, supported on the income of a bequest which required a certain uniform, and it was nothing unusual to see little fellows with knee breeches constructed of several contrasting colors and materials, and one stocking suriped and the other a set color, while the coat beat old Jacob's many colors for Joseph's raiment all out of sight. The stranger soon finds out that these children are as proud of their livery as the flunky coachmen and footmen of the nobility are of theirs, although to an unaccustomed eye they appear as if they had copied the dress of the organ grinder's monkey, while I suspect the organ grinder to take his pattern from these liveried servitors.

Each of these gifts are encumbered by strict provisions, and a change of pattern in the dress or failure to comply with every whim of the legatee, would cause the forfeiture of the it.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Another Disappointment -- Remarkable Instance of Filial Affection.

Special Correspondence of the News.

WASHINGTON, April 26, 1887.

The President has treated the people of Washington to another unpleasant surprise, in the appointment of an Ohio man to be Chief Justice of the District Supreme Bench. The local Democracy feel themselves greatly abused by a President for whom they did so much. After contributing generously in money, and working effectively in other ways to promote Cleveland's election, to be deprived of the few spoils the Dis-trict affords, is in their own emphatic opinion, gross injustice and rank in-gratitude. And there are grains of reason in their complaint. Much un-favorable comment has been expressed, in which the President's own friends have shared, upon his course with respect to appointments in the territories, and in the District of Columbia. Local men for local office is a just principle from every standpoint of reason and equity, and should be enforced without the binding obligation of a previously avowed adherence to that policy. Mr. Cleveland cordially endorsed the home-rule plank in the Chicago platform, and further committed himself to such a policy in his subsequent public utterances. His course in this regard is the subject of severe criticism. But in this, as in other cases, he demonstrates his decision, his independence, and his indifference to Ohio, Monday, but failing, cut his opinion. When he deems it expedient to pursue a certain line of action, he adheres to that course notwithstanding pronounced public dis-

> A remarkable instance of filial affection was disclosed a few days ago. A gentleman who had been holding a prominent office in a government department, suddenly lost his position, notwithstanding his splendid record and his long years of service. A married son who was also a clerk relinquished his own position upon the understanding with the authorihe is better able to skirmish for a living, than is his father. There can be no doubt of the success of a man who demonstrates such an unselfish, manly nature. It is not known to people outside of Washington how destitute this city is of opportunities for employment; and when men and women who have spent their lives in government service, and who have families depending upon them, are discharged from their positions as a result of political changes, the sadness of their condition cannot be appreciated. It may be argued that in a life-time of service they should have accumulated enough to provide for their wants in such an emergency. This is true in individual cases, With the great majority expensive habits of living induced by short hours and good salaries, prelude the possibility of a surplus. > Last Sunday afternoon, A. G. Kirkman, our efficient county treasurer, preached a good sermon here from the text, "Whatsoever things are honest, just, pure, lovely, of good report," &c., "think on these things." He put special emphasis on these things in connection with our reading. Showing what things we should read and think on. He wisely condemned the fearful amount of time and thought devoted to reading novels and vicious, poisinous literature. O, that all preachers would cry out aloud, and spare not, against such reading among mental and moral natures.

The Methodist Episcopal Church South has gotten lumber on the ground for a house of worship. G. J. Smith has the frame of the ad-

STATE NEWS.

Hon. W. H. H. Cowles will deliver the memorial address in Raleigh. ---At the Raleigh and Gaston shops a reading room is being fitted up for the employees. It is to occupy an entire building east of the shops and across the railway track. Standard works, as well as current literature, are to be provided, and no doubt the reading room will be as profitable as popular. -About three o'clock yesterday afternoon, at Forestville, Wake county, a colored boy aged about 13 years, named Robert Ligon, was accidentally shot and killed by Mr. M. E. Vann. The facts of the case, as we have been enabled to gather them, are as follows: Mr. Vann, together with the depot agent and the little boy were in the depot room, when Mr. Vann, who had a Flobert rifle in his hand, told the lad to run. The boy ran into an adjoining room, closing the door, when Mr. V. quickly fired at him, the ball going through the door and striking the little fellow in the temple, causing instant death. The killing was entirely accidental, and causes Mr. Vann much distress. The coroner, in response to a telegram went out this morning to hold an inquest.-Raleigh Visitor, 26th.
