AN EARL'S DAUGHTER IN COURT.

Sued for an Unpaid Furniture Bill-Her Unsuccessful Novel.

LONDON, June 8 .- This afternoon, at the Westminister County Court, Lady Constance Howard, the daughter of the Earl of Winchelsea and sister of the late Lord Maidstone, appeared to a judgment summons at the instance of Mr. Quantrell, Turniture dealer, of Wardour Oxford street. Judge Bailey asked the defendant if she was married. The defendant replied in the affirmative, but added that her father had stopped her allowance of £200 a year, and she was entirely dependent on her husband, who is the second son of the Earl of Effingham. In reply the solicitor for the plaintiff, Lady Constance said it was true that she was a novelist and that she had written the following novels: "Mated with a Clown," "Mollie Darling" and 'Only a Village Maiden," but she had only made about £20 out of them. She denied that she had written "Major Toddles." She also denied that she went much in society now, and added that as to novel-writing she found it did not pay. Mr. Quantrell called the Judge's attention to an action in a superior cour, during which the defendant had declared that she had an allowance from her father, the Earl of the oldest fifteen years of age.
