E. Thompson Gale, who died in Troy, N. Y., Monday, left an estate valued at over $2,000,000. His wife, who died in 1864, was Caroline De Forest, daughter of Benjamin De Forest, formerly one of New York's most prominent merchants.

It is an interesting fact that both Stagg, the famous Yale pitcher, and Caldwell, stroke of the winning Varsity crew, will devote their lives to the ministry. Their influence as clergymen will be all the greater from their success as athletes.

Attorney-General Garland's family left this city Tuesday for West Point, Niagara Falls and Montreal. The Attorney-General is keeping bachelor's hall in Washington. Miss Daisy Garland will be one of the Washington debutantes next winter. She is a handsome brunette, with brilliant eyes, black hair, olive complexion and a languid manner. She will doubtless receive much attention at the capital after her debut.

The eldest daughter of the late Gen. Worth has been removed recently from a clerkship in the Quartermaster-General's office in Washington. Miss Worth is about sixty years of age, quite feeble, and she has been in the Government service a great many years. She has no means of support, and it is understood that her removal is a serious blow to her. Her father was one of the leading figures in the war of 1812 and in the Mexican war.

William Wayne, a descendant of "Mad Anthony" Wayne, presided at the annual meeting of the Society of the Cincinnati which was held in Philadelphia Monday. The Society has in its possession a fund of $128,000 for the erection of a statue to George Washington. The site for the statue is on a bold promontory overlooking Girard Avenue Bridge where it crosses the Schuylkill. George W. Childs has been elected an honorary member of the Society.

President Cleveland lunches at 2 o'clock every afternoon. From the lunch table he goes back to his office and remains until 5 o'clock, working literally with his sleeves rolled up, and disposing of the business which has accumulated during the morning. At 5 o'clock the President and his wife take a drive, usually going out to Oak View. Dinner is served at the White House at 7 o'clock. Generally the President spends his evenings at his desk and never retires before midnight.

Personal Traits of the Czar.

Alexander III. was always one of the most taciturn of Princes, so, before he became Emperor, very little was really known of his character and opinions beyond the limits of the court. When this is the case with an heir apparent there are plenty of people ready to invent bon mots and ideas for him, but he certainly gave the impression of being almost without a care and of having a ready capacity for enjoyment. No one at the theater laughed more at the comic parts of a play; but it is hard on a man when he cannot applaud the ingenuity of three actresses who stood together, one dressed in red, the second in white, and the third in blue, after the German Ambassador had remonstrated at the tricolor being displayed on a St. Petersburg stage, without being at once sat down as the stanchest Francophile. The tragic event of March 13, 1881, undoubtedly sobered him, and he has ever since been a sadder and graver man. That fatal Sunday afternoon he had parted from his father, after a service at the riding-school, and was sitting down to luncheon half an hour later with his wife at the Anitchkov Palace, when the news reached him that his own accession to the throne was imminent, and they both hastened to the Winter Palace. At 4:30 they drove away again for luncheon half an hour later with his wife at the Anitchkov Palace, when the news reached him that his own accession to the throne was imminent, and they both hastened to the Winter Palace. The Emperor is an athlete in appearance—tall, broad-shouldered, and of considerable weight. He was born March 10, 1845, so is 41 years of age. Of all the Danish King's sons-in-law he is the most popular in Denmark, where he has resided for weeks at his father-in-law's palace, content with the society of his wife and of her family, and with such simple amusements as the Castle of Rosenborg could afford. As a youth he was much averse to study, and his father did not press it on him, believing a vigorous constitution to be of more importance than erudition; but when the unexpected death of his elder brother made it probable that he would some day bear the scepter, he took pains to fit himself for his new prospects. Educated by what we should call a very high church and conservative tutor, he has shown no inclination to make any extensive alterations in the Russian administration.

A Queer Patient.

Living with a prominent physician of this city, and undergoing treatment for a nervous disorder, is a young woman whose name it is not material to the story to make public. Soon after she went to live in the family, or soon before, it is not exactly known which, money was missed from the house, but nothing was said of it. One day the patient walked into the parlor and informed the family which was assembled there, that they had lost money, but requested them not to worry about the loss as the money would be returned, though perhaps in small sums. Sure enough in a few days the lost money began to flow back through the mails, $1 or $2 at a time. When spoken to subsequently about the revelation she had made, the young woman seemed utterly amazed, and denied that she had ever made any such disclosure. Then it dawned upon the family, they say, that this young woman was a somnambulist, if not possessed of supernatural powers. One day members of the household went out to do some shopping. While in a shoe store the young woman talked very intelligently to a clerk about shoes, and finally concluded that she could not afford just then to purchase a pair. Next day she knew nothing at all about the event, and insisted that she had not been out of doors on the day in question. On another occasion she came down-stairs and told the family the house was to be burglarized on a certain night at a given hour and minute, which she named. About 8 o'clock on the evening of the night when the burglary was to occur she again sauntered down-stairs, and with the same unconcerned air told the family that at 7 o'clock that evening the burglars had changed their plans regarding the time, but that the burglary would take place in precisely the manner already described. A few nights afterward a noise in the front hall caused an alarm to be raised. A lamp was lighted, when it was discovered that the door had been forced in just as the young woman said it would be, but nothing had been stolen. This story has been told the police.—Syracuse Journal.

It is related of an absent-minded old bachelor, who was recently married at Athens, Ga., that when, in the marriage ceremony, it became his duty to place the ring on the fair maid's finger he drew a silver quarter from his pocket and handed it to the bride, to the consternation and confusion of all parties. After he had embarked on a train for the wedding tour and the conductor came around for tickets, he discovered that he had bought only one ticket, forgetting that he had doubled his expenses and responsibilities that day.

"It Saved My Life"

Is a common expression, often heard from those who have realized, by personal use, the curative powers of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. "I cannot say enough in praise of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, believing as I do that, but for its use, I should long since have died from lung troubles. — E. Dragdon, Palestine, Tex.

About six months ago I had a severe Hemorrhage of the Lungs, brought on by a distressing Cough, which deprived me of sleep and rest. I had used various cough balms and expectorants, without obtaining relief. A friend advised me to try

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and am happy to say that it helped me at once. By continued use, this medicine cured my cough, and I am satisfied, saved my life. — Mrs. E. Coburn, 18 Second st., Lowell, Mass.

I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for over a year, and sincerely believe I should have been in my grave, had it not been for this medicine. It has cured me of a dangerous affection of the lungs, for which I had almost despaired of ever finding a remedy. — D. A. McMillan, Windsor, Province of Ontario.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life. Two years ago I took a very severe cold, which settled on my lungs. I consulted physicians, and took the remedies they prescribed, but failed to obtain relief until I began using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Two bottles of this medicine completely restored my health. — James M. Allen, West Lancaster, Ohio.
