This might not sound so "highly moral" but it would be nearer the truth.-State Chronicle.

The Chronicle's suggestion will hardly be adopted by the Club in question. The Prohibitionists of Guilford may not be as wise in their own conceit as some other folks, but they claim to be as good judges of their own actions, both as regards the propriety and the consequences of those actions, as any gentleman living in Raleigh, or elsewhere. If the Chronicle man knew the politics of Guilford as well as some of those at whose wisdom he sneers, he might be able to trace the defeat of the Democrats to some other cause than the Prohibition movement.
