KENTUCKY'S LATEST FEUD.

Four Lives Already Sacrificed in the Turner-Sowers Quarrel.

Five lives have been sacrificed in the latest Kentucky feud on Yellow Creek, in Bell county.

Lee Turner and General Sowers were brothers-in-law and lived in sight of each other on Yellow Creek. They had some family difficulty and Turner waylaid and shot Sowers, but not dangerously. They made up and everything went well for a while. The quarrel broke out again at a school-house gathering, and Sowers went up to his father's house. Soon after Turner went up, and a lively shooting affair occurred, Turner being killed.

A warrant was taken out for Sowers, but they have never caught him.

Jim Rains was a great friend of Sowers. A week or two after the latter was shot Rains was shot dead while walking along the road. Harvey Turner, a brother of Lee, was his slayer. The warrant went out for the arrest of Harvey Turner brought on the next killing.

The sheriff's posse went up to Yellow Creek to make the arrest, and met Jack Turner. Harvey's uncle, in the road. They were not after him, but some how an altercation arose up, though no one seemed to know why. Turner shot off and somebody fired at him when a hundred yards away. Turner returned the shot, and the posse set on after him. They did not go far till the quarrel came out of a corn field, and the shooting began again. George Thomas, the Marshal of Pineville, was killed and this ended the fight.

Somebody thought that Jack Turner was in this last crowd, and he killed him. He was a good fellow, and was worth $5,000, and the Grand Jury indicted the Turner family, and he was shot. The Turner family stayed around for two or three days and then went home for a day or two, when he came back, and one day he was walking up the street he was shot and killed in front of the Monroe Hotel by somebody concealed.

Several shots were fired, and the men who killed him are supposed to be Sowers, Green Turner and Harvey Turner. The latter was killed by Sowers' sister, and is a cousin of Lee Turner, the first man killed. He surrendered himself, and was released the next day. He belonged to the Turner crowd.

"The man who killed was Howard Monroe, though it is reported that Dick Pierce was shot in the thigh the other day. He belonged to the Turner crowd."

"Monroe went on Saturday week to John Myers' house, about four miles from Cumberland Gap. With Turner and Harvey Turner stayed around for two or three days and then went home for a day or two, when he came back, and one day he was walking up the street he was shot and killed in front of the Monroe Hotel by somebody concealed.
