Of how our gallant soldiers, Clad in their loyal blue, Wero camping near a river, The day's long march o'er, And resting limbs a-wear Upon the wooded shore. Unknown to them the "Johnnies, Across the water wide, Had pitched their place of resting Upon the other side. And of each other's presence possible - for men to be."-Cincinnati The first became aware When hostile bands of music This was Lincoln's advice to the new Burst on the evening air.

> And these two rivals, playing The tunes that each loved best, Made discord, strange and clanging, That broke the evening's rest; Till one, with tender yearning. Played softly "Home, Sweet Home," The other caught it quickly, And ochoed back "Sweet Home."

Was that a blessed omen Of days in time to come, When soldiers of the blue and gray Should rally for the home? And standing side by side Sound forth their battle cry, "For God and home and native land We'll conquer or we'll die." And conquer they will surely, For they are in the right; And forth they go to battle With prayer to God for might, And wisdom to prevail Over the deadliest foe, That desecrates our homes
