FINE PROSPECTS!

THE YOUNG MEN ENLISTING.

Macon County, Sept. 24, 1888.

Ed. Prohibitionist:—It is with much pleasure that I inform you of some of the strength of our party in the west. Swain county is going to poll two hundred or more votes. Am confident Macon will go one hundred or more. Am told that Clay will give a majority. I find men or ming from both parts to us. Have never voted for President, and am going to give my first vote for Fisk.

Ing that others may do wrong and be in the majority.

Also for a professing disciple of Christ who prefers to be with the majority knowsing its practices to be not right, rather than with the minority believing its principles are right.

If God's word teaches anything it is to do right, and He will take care of His little ones.

IS HE YOUR MINISTER?

We have two churches here—Presby. MACON COUNTY, Sept. 24, 1888.

In an article which appeared in your paper not long since he stated his belief that the traffic in distilled liquor is an infamous crime which ought to be punished. For this expression he has been taken to task, and has been told that he thus censures the best men of the past; that his immediate ancestors were distillers. The answer to this is, Had they lived in this day they would have acted differently. This is proved by the fact that the father and grandfathers of the writer, and the best men of their time did see their error. best men of their time did see their error, and did renounce and denounce the business. There are persons now living whose recollection reaches back, I think,

In many respects there has been great progress in the present century. In its beginning men knew comparatively little of what was taking place beyond their their immediate neighborhood. The knowledge of events then transpiring, was communicated slowly to distant points. Then little was known of the evils of intemperance compared with what we know of those evils.
