DR. J. HENRY SMITH IS DEAD

He Passed Peacefully Away This Morning.

AN ESTIMATE OF THE MAN.

Something of Dr. Smith's Early Life And His Work in Other Fields.

Funeral Will Take Place Tomorrow at 3 p. m.

Dr. J. Henry Smith, pastor of the First Presbyterian church here and one of the best known divines in the State, died at his home on Church street this morning. His death has been expected for sometime though he had rallied somewhat from the critical state of a few weeks ago.

Yesterday however Dr. Smith grew rapidly worse and passed a very bad night, sleeping fitfully and only by the aid of opiates. During the latter part of the night he was in a semi-conscious state. During the morning he sank continually until about 9 o'clock, when the end came so peacefully that the watchers were hardly aware of it.

The funeral services will be conducted at the Presbyterian church tomorrow at three o'clock. The Elders of Dr. Smith's church will act as honorary and the deacons as active pall bearers.

Dr. Jethro Rumble, of Salisbury will conduct the funeral services according to a request of Dr. Smith sometime before his death. They were old and intimate friends. The church is being draped this evening preparatory to the service tomorrow.

THE MINISTER AND THE MAN.

It is impossible to describe the deep feeling of sadness, which so many hearts have felt as the tidings went from house to house that the voice of Dr. J. Henry Smith will be heard no more. The beloved form, so familiar to us all, will soon be deposited in the grave, no more to meet our view till the resurrection morn. The death of such a man is a loss which is deeply felt, not merely by his own church and congregation and the entire community, but it will thrill the hearts of thousands, irrespective of denominational differences, throughout his native state. While it is true the church at large has been deprived of one of its ablest and most useful divines, the blow falls most heavily upon his bereaved family and his own church.

He was a model father and husband. His tender affection for and his careful training of his children awakened in return their filial confidence, love and obedience, and has been rewarded in the position they now occupy in church and society. Amid his arduous, indefatigable and unceasing ministerial duties and labors, he never failed to realize that, as a father, he had a work to do, certainly of as great importance as any that rested upon him as a minister. Knowing well the dangers to which small, as well as older children, are exposed when absent from the parental roof, it was his constant effort, aided by the mother of his children, to make home so attractive that they would not desire to seek happiness or pleasure elsewhere. Both wisdom and care were exercised in directing their reading and studies as to make pleasant even such tasks as are often considered irksome, or when this could not be done he wisely encouraged such offset as would overcome difficulties. He sympathized with them in their plays and amusements, often himself entering heartily into them, thus making himself their companion while they loved and revered him.

It is needless to speak of him as a pastor and minister. The deep and ever growing affection in which he has been held by the people of his own charge, or perhaps it is more proper to say the mutual love and esteem between the pastor and his people, tells its own tale. In these days of unrest and change, when long pastorates are exceedingly rare, an exception the rule that the mutual affection of which we have spoken, should have continued, not only with unabated breath, but with ever increasing strength is a more effective and enduring monument to his worth than any one of "marble can possibly be. As we look back over these years, how many and tender memories crowd themselves upon us. How often his presence in the chamber of sickness and death, together with his prayers and wise and divinely directed words of instruction and comfort have cheered and strengthened both the dying and the bereaved survivors. How many anxious inquiries after the life and peace have found that which they sought; the Holy Spirit using him as His instrument in leading them to Christ as their Savior; his widely extended fame as an able and sound divine, makes it still less necessary to speak of him in this capacity. Here again his record is in the hearts and the minds of the vast multitudes who have heard him.

This day is a day of wide-spread grief and mourning, for a great and a good man has been taken from us. But there is a bright side to the picture. We sorrow not as those without hope. That which we call death is not such, but only a transition into a higher and nobler life. Write from henceforth "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." Yea, saith the Lord, "that they may rest from their labors and their works, do follow them." The reward awaiting such labors is unspeakably great.—Courtesy of the Westminster Presbyterian.

SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.

Jacob Henry Smith, D. D., the oldest son of Samuel R. and Margaret Smith, was born in Lexington, Rock-bridge county, Va. August 13th, 1820. He was prepared for college in his native town, and graduated from Washington College—now Washington and Lee University—June 29th, 1843. In the Fall of the same year he entered Union Theological Seminary, Va., and taking the full course, received his certificate in 1846, and in August of the same year he was licensed by Lexington Presbytery, and transferred to West Hanover Presbytery. In September of this year he took charge of the Church at Pittsylvania C. H., Va., where he was ordained and installed July 31st, 1847. Being invited to take charge of "Samuel Davies Institute," in Halifax county, Va., as Principal and Professor of Greek and Latin, he went thither in the beginning of 1850, and conducted that Institution with great success until 1854. At that time he was invited to Greensboro, N. C., and Charlottesville, Va. Accepting the latter place, he preached at Charlottesville till 1859, when he accepted the renewed invitation to Greensboro, N. C., and began his work here April 20th, 1859. In June following he was received by Orange Presbytery, and installed in July over the Greensboro Church, where he continued to labor with great success and acceptance.

Dr. Smith was an accomplished classical and Belles Lettres scholar, a well-informed theologian, and fairly abreast of the literature of the day. He was the owner of a good, well-selected and well-read library of sacred and polite literature. But his peculiar forte was that he was a powerful and impressive preacher. His sermons were finished and polished productions, filled with the choicest thought and garnished with graceful allusions, and enlivened with appropriate illustrations. To the polish of the graceful composer, Dr. Smith added the attractions of the skillful elocutionist, and the controlling power of a magnificent voice.

The Lord has greatly blessed his labors, granting him revival after revival in his own churches, and in others. In 1872 Hampden-Sidney College conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity, and in 1877 the University of North Carolina repeated the honor.

Dr. J. Henry Smith was twice married. To Miss Catherine Malvina Miller, daughter of Hon. Thomas Miller, of Powhatan county, Va., March 15th, 1848. She died June 9th, 1854. To Miss Mary Kelly Watson, daughter of Judge E. R. Watson, of Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 8th, 1857.

SAND STORMS IN AUSTRALIA.

Woman Beaten into Insensibility By Burglars--A Captivist Falls into a Cellar in Atlanta and Injures Himself.

By wire to THE TELEGRAM.

New York, Nov. 22—Justice Wilmut F. Smith entered the court room at Long Island City this morning 9:30 and announced that he was unable to go on with the new Thorn trial. It was suggested that Justice Maddox of the Supreme court preside but at the conference which followed the attorneys could reach no agreement. Long before the hour for opening a large crowd had gathered at the court house and watched the clock impatiently until 9:30. At that hour Thorn was brought into court smiling but rather nervous. He shows signs of breaking down. It is not stated when the trial will be resumed but district attorney Young said it would not be delayed long.

A later dispatch says that it has been decided that Judge Maddox will preside at the Thorn trial and the case will go on without delay.

USED A ROCK.

The Victim Had a Gash Cut in His Cranium—The Negro Arrested.

"Two fights and a foot race." The foot race has not come off yet, but the fights were pulled off in a hurry. Shortly after the fracas at Wood's barber shop, an account of which is given elsewhere, Mr. W. L. Hepler was standing on the street, near the court house, talking to Mr. J. R. Holt, when a colored carriage driver named Will Mason, drove up and demanded that Hepler get out of his way—so the story is told—and Hepler told the driver there was plenty of room to go around.

A few warm words, and it is said that Hepler called the negro some kind of a rascal, or scoundrel, or words to that effect.

The negro watered his horse, and coming up near Mr. Hepler, demanded: "Are you the man who cursed me?" or language of the same import, and at the same time struck Mr. Hepler on the head with a rock, cutting a large gash from which blood flowed freely.

Mason drove off down street near the McAdoo, but in less than five minutes Officer Scott had gently gathered him in, put a handsome pair of bracelets on his wrists and escorted him to the calaboose where he will have time to reflect on the hardships and cruelties of this unfeeling world.

GEORGE AND WILEY.

And How They Swatted One Another "In de Maw'nin."

Two of the doughy wielders of "de razor" in Woods Barber shop had a small misunderstanding this morning. George is the ginger-bread hued wielder and Wiley is of a rich deep ebony. Wiley insinuated that George was not exactly the peer of Solomon in brain power, although he did not use just those words, and George being ginger-bread as aforesaid, would not "take dat off no brack nigger" and the fun began. Wiley landed with power and earnestness on George's nose and George reciprocated on Wiley's "Mouf" in one two three order. Then they clinched and tumbled to the floor with George on top when the other employes separated them. And now the wonder is that in the abode of razors neither of the "colored gemmens" thought to use one. The stigma of the razor should henceforth be removed from the brother in black.

The Merry-makers.

The "Merry-makers" will open a 3 nights' engagement at the Academy Thursday night. The prices of admission will be 10, 20, and 30 cts. The Lebanon Times says of the organization:

The "Merry-makers" opened a week's engagement in Fisher's Opera House last evening, appearing in "Pinnigan's Fortune." The piece was new and afforded the kind of amusement which every person present looked for and enjoyed. It can be said that the company gives all they claim, and that our lovers of the theatre have a rich treat in store. To single out the star of the company would be a difficult matter, as each performer proved to be an artist and in the right role. The specialties were original and of the best order.

This comedy, as produced by the "Merry-makers," is filled to overflowing with side-splitting incidents, first class specialties, singing, trick, scenery, acrobatic feats, etc.

By Wire to THE TELEGRAM.

DISEASE SPREAD BY PENCILS.

Sterilization Suggested to Protect Children.

Indianapolis, Nov. 21.—The health authorities are making an investigation of the rapid spread of diphtheria and other contagious diseases among children since the public schools opened in September, and believe they have found the cause in the system followed in the use of penholders and lead pencils. All the pencils and penholders are gathered together each day just before dismissal and placed in a box on the teacher's desk. The next morning the pencils and penholders are redistributed, so that each child may get different pencils and penholders every day. City Sanitarian Clark says that it is second nature for children to place pencils and penholders in their mouths when at study, and that thus disease may be communicated from child to child. The City Sanitarian is experimenting with a preparation by which the pencils and penholders can be sterilized each day.

Facts Worth Studying.

If the Southern Stock-Mutual pays no larger dividends than the 20 per cent. now paid, and the business increases during the next seven years in the same ratio it has increased during the last three years, the actual saving for the ten years to policy-holders in North and South Carolina will be $194,822.00, and to the policy-holders in Greensboro alone, $26,237.00. Besides this the Company's assets (reinsurance reserve and surplus) represented by still larger figures will be kept at home and invested in the state. What better investment can the public make than by upholding an institution like this?
