RUN OVER BY A TRAIN?

Man Found by the Tracks Beyond the Coal Chute.

TERRIBLE WOUNDS IN HIS HEAD

He Was Found About Three O'Clock This Morning—Small Chance of Recovery.

Acting on a rumor a Telegram reporter rode out beyond the coal chutes, a half mile, this morning, where he found lying in the home of Albert Griffin one Henry Jackson, supposed to have been run over by a train some time during the early morning. He was lying on a pallet on the floor where he had been placed when found. About half past three this morning Andy Wyrick and John Duckworth, who work at Pomona Nurseries, were going home from the city when they found Jackson of the Southern, just in front of Griffin's home. A gallon jug, nearly full of whiskey, was setting about six feet away. It was not overturned, but seemed to have been set down carefully. The Telegram reporter examined the ground where Jackson was found. His head, as shown by the blood, had lain squarely against the rail and between the cross-ties. He had bled profusely after the accident. It is not known whether he was struck by a train coming into or going out of Greensboro, or, indeed, whether he was struck by a train at all. His face was turned toward the south when found and if struck by a train it was probably an incoming one. It is difficult to see, however, how he could have the track if struck squarely. He was probably sitting down on or near the rail. The ground showed no evidences of a struggle having taken place and there was no blood except where the body had lain. This showed clearly that he had not moved after receiving the blow.

LYING BY THE TRACKS

FALLEN SO NEAR

HIS WOUNDS

are horrible in appearance. One is on his forehead just above the eye and is several inches long. The most serious one, however, is on the back of the head where the skull is probably fractured. He had bled much after being placed on the pallet. The reporter saw him shortly before eleven o'clock and the blood had not been washed from his face and he had received no medical attention whatever. He was

BREATHING STERTOROUSLY

and was unconscious. It was not known whether he had received any injuries other than those on the head. Dr. Ledbetter, the county physician, had been called to see him about 7 o'clock this morning and after a cursory examination had ordered him removed to the poor house, as Griffin declined to keep him. While the reporter was at the house a wagon came in which he was to be hauled. The reporter was asked about the matter and gave it as his opinion that if the attempt was made to move him he would die before the poor house was reached. Thereupon his brother-in-law, Joe Barbee, declined to move him. The reporter returned to the city and phoned Mr. Boren, president of the board of county commissioners, and also saw Dr. Ledbetter, who went to dress his wounds. He had been nine hours without medical attention. Griffin told the reporter that he would care for the man if the county would pay him for the trouble. This is the arrangement that will probably be made. The Telegram had secured a surgeon to attend Jackson at once, but after seeing the county physician, the matter was dropped. Jackson has the appearance of being about 35 years of age. He has been twice married and a little boy who lives with his grandmother at Hill Top, some five miles from Greensboro. His relatives are poor people and are not able to give him proper attention. Dr. Brooks very generously offered to have the sufferer cared for at Astley-Cooper hospital for the bare expenses of the treatment.

HAS ONE CHILD,

JENNINGS' VERSION.

William Jennings, who figured in the Ryan case, says that he was with Jackson last night and that both were drunk. He tried to persuade Jackson to accompany him toward Pomona, but the latter refused and setting his jug down stood still near the main track of the Southern. He left Jackson standing and walked on about 100 yards when he met a train going toward Greensboro. This was about 11 o'clock and was the belated local passenger from the south. He did not see the train strike Jackson and did not see him again last night.

WOUNDS DRESSED.

About two o'clock Drs. Ledbetter and Broadnax went out to dress Jackson's wounds. They claim in explanation of the delay that the patient had not rallied sufficiently to stand the necessary operation. The chances of recovery for the patient are very small.

NUMBER KILLED STILL UNKNOWN

Buildings Wrecked For Blocks Around—Ruins Being Searched For Missing Workmen.

By Wire to THE TELEGRAM.

Jersey City, Dec. 24.—Explosion followed explosion at the works of the Acetylene Gas Company where one hundred persons were employed at 9:30 this morning. The manufacturers of the gas have been making some experiments, during one of which one of the immense tanks exploded, destroying part of the buildings and setting off explosions of the other tanks. Workmen were blown in all directions and many were injured. The shock was felt throughout the city. The volunteer corps is searching for the missing workmen unaccounted for. Many of the buildings in the vicinity were wrecked.

All the police could do was to keep back the crowds among whom were the wives of the workmen. Among those in the building at the time of the explosion were Max Grim, Fred Burr, Fritz Epzal, Charles White, Engineer Foller. Grim was blown through a window and his mangled body was picked up several hundred feet away. Foller who was also killed was found in the ruins. All the rest were seriously injured. The number of missing is unknown.

Facts Worth Studying.

If the Southern Stock-Mutual pays no larger dividends than the 20 per cent. now paid, and the business increases during the next seven years in the same ratio it has increased during the last three years, the actual saving for the ten years to policy-holders in North and South Carolina will be $194,822.00, and to the policy-holders in Greensboro alone, $26,237.00. Besides this the Company's assets (reinsurance reserve and surplus) represented by still larger figures will be kept at home and invested in the state. What better investment can the public make than by upholding an institution like this?
