THE MONUMENT TO GILLIES

The Bugler Boy of Light Horse Harry Lee's Legion.

UNVEILED AT BATTLE GROUND.

A Beautiful Poem Written By Mrs. E. D. Hundley, of Greensboro. Picture of Monument.

Gillies, first name not recorded in any history, was killed by Tarleton's dragoons near Oak Ridge, on the morning of Feb. 12th, 1781, during Greene's famous retreat to the north side of Dan river. He was with a scouting party; but had just been dismounted and made to exchange horses with the guide and had been ordered to the rear, with information for the Colonel. The guide and others, who had gone forward and met the enemy and being outnumbered dashed down the road. The dragoons overtook the bugler, who was left in the race owing to the country-man's inferior horse, and killed him with their sabers. The Americans, now re-enforced, rushed to his rescue; but too late to save him. They killed eighteen of the dragoons in the fight and captured the captain. The Literary Societies of Oak Ridge Institute have erected this cenotaph to the memory of the bugler. It cost them about $250.00. The bronze tablet is very beautiful. At the top is the figure of the bugler, in the uniform of Lee's Legion, superbly mounted. The following is the inscription:

GILLIES.
"Light Horse Harry" Lee's Bugler. Dulce et decorum pro patria mori. Erected by the Literary Societies and Alumni of Oak Ridge Institute, May 6th, 1898, to the memory of the gallant Gillies, who fell under the swords of Tarleton's dragoons near Oak Ridge, N. C., Feb. 12th, 1781; a noble sacrifice to his own generosity and for his country's freedom.

The ceremonies attending the unveiling of the beautiful and fitting monument to the brave Gillies at the Battle Ground today were impressive and inspiring. The clouds of the early morn were scattered ere the sun had reached its zenith and a large crowd were present to witness the unveiling. The High Point band, in full uniform, discoursed inspiring airs, the colors of the two female colleges of Greensboro and the stars and stripes fluttered in the balmy springtime breeze, and patriotism was at full tide.

The speakers were at their best and captivated their hearers with eloquent, patriotic words. The length of the program, with the beautiful poem, printed below, occupies so much space that a synopsis of the speeches cannot be given today. Prof. M. H. Holt was master of ceremonies and in a happy manner did he perform these duties.

The following is the entire programme of the unveiling:

Invocation—Rev. T. M. Johnson, Greensboro, N. C.
Music—High Point Cornet Band.
Presentation of the Cenotaph to the Guilford Battle Ground Company—R. T. Barnhill, Philomathean Society Oak Ridge Institute.
Speech of acceptance on behalf of the company—Z. V. Taylor, Esq., Greensboro.

—Music.
The part of young men in the Revolution—W. L. Cridlebaugh, Athenian Society, Oak Ridge Institute.
"The Bugler Boy"—A poem by Mrs. E. D. Hundley, of Greensboro.

Remarks in Behalf of Alumni—Hon. John R. Webster, Reidsville.
Remarks by Distinguished Visitors.
Patriotic Songs—Young ladies of State Normal College.
Unveiling Cenotaph—Miss Capel, Greensboro Female College, Miss Holt, Salem Female Academy, Miss McGehee, State Normal College, Miss Holt, Oak Ridge Institute.
Prof. J. Allen Holt read the following poem written by Mrs. E. D. Hundley.

THE BUGLER BOY.

'Tis as sad a story as ever was told
Of the "Bugler Boy," with a heart of gold,
A beardless youth, so fair to see
Who rode with "Light Horse Harry" Lee.

'Twas chill and murk, in the wintry sky
Where the bitter winds, with a moan,
Went by—
But the Bugler Boy with his shining horn
Was blithe and gay, as a summer morn.

He thought of home, as he scoured the plain,
Of the mother he soon should see again,
Of the little brothers and sisters at play,
How they dreamed of him so far away.
With Harry Lee, through forest and field,
With never a sword, with never a shield,
Only a bugle, whose mellow note,
Was sweet as a strain from the wild bird's throat.

With Harry Lee, the trusted and tried,
This boy of fifteen, with a soldier's pride,
Rode boldly forth on that direful day,
On the rode where the cruel Tarleton lay.
Hark! the clatter of hoofs! Who is it comes there?
'Tis Tarleton's men, with swords all bare,
Ho! ride for your life brave Harry Lee,
They are ten to one, so turn and flee.

He is off like a flash, like a glance of light,
But the Bugler Boy, oh! pitiful sight!
His horse is down, too feeble for flight
And the unarmed boy, o'erpowered by might,
Cut down by the swords of that dastardly crew,
Pierced by their bayonets through and through,
He lay in death, his mother's joy—
The murdered, but glorified, Bugler Boy.

His comrades saw how the deed was done
And heedless of meeting a hundred to one
Dashed from their coverts with vengeful ire,
And put them to rout with sword and fire.

Placid and calm, a smile on his face,
They found the poor boy in Death's cold embrace
All bathed in blood, and close by his side
Shone the silvery bugle, his boyish pride.

Where the grand old oaks, like sentinels stand,
Their giant branches o'er shading the land,
They made him a grave, 'neath the dewy sod
And left him, sweetly sleeping with God.

A hundred years have passed since then,
A century, and more, in the lives of men,
But acts like these, and deeds sublime
Are not effaced by the tide of time.

So we come today with pulses high,
To rear a shaft, toward the bending sky,
Where the name of Gillies, dazzlingly bright,
Shall shine through the ages, a beacon light,
Telling the world this story of old,
Of the Bugler Boy with a heart of gold,
The bonnie lad so fair to see
Who rode with "Light Horse Harry" Lee.

Without License.

Two canvassers, who were selling enlarged portraits without license, were arrested this morning. They are subject to a fine of $20 and costs and will have to pay a license tax of $10 each. They refused to do this, however, and will let the question go to trial in order to make a test case of it. Mayor Nelson was attending the celebration at the Battle Ground this morning and will hear the case this afternoon when he returns. There can be but little doubt but that the canvassers will have to pay the tax as the city ordinance is very explicit in regard to this matter.

Mr. Otterbourg Dead.

Mr. J. J. Otterbourg, who, it will be remembered, hanged himself last Sunday afternoon, but was discovered and taken down before life was extinct, lingered until last night about 10 o'clock when he died. It was thought a day or two ago that he would get well. He seemed to be improving fast but only for a short while. The interment will be made this afternoon at 5 o'clock.
