The Marblehead, Nashville and Windom threw shells into the bushes but were unable to successfully locate the batteries of the Spaniards who were using smokeless powder.

CABLE CUT.

The Americans began the search for the cable under a frightful fire from the shore and found the cable and succeeded in cutting it. The Spaniards attempted to stop the search by using machine guns. One American was shot three times through the chest and head and yet he is living. Lieutenant Winslow of the Nashville lost three fingers in the fight. Robert Boltz, a North Carolinian, was dying when the Windom left. Harry Henrickson was also in a dying condition. A shot struck Capt. Maynard to the floor and continuing passed through the shoulder of Ensign S. Parrish. The forts were completely annihilated by the bombarders.

THE SECOND BOMBARDMENT.

Key West, May 14-A dispatch boat has just arrived and with it comes the report of the second bombardment of Cardenas. The raking and terrible fire from the guns of the Yankee ships destroyed the forts and the masked batteries and the shells from the American gunboats burned the city. One hundred and thirteen dead Spaniards were found near the batteries and it is known that three hundred Spaniards perished in the flames when the city was burned.
