A PLEASANT TRIP.

And a Night Spent Among The Hills of Randolph.

Leaving the city on the noon train yesterday we alighted at Liberty and found the village almost deserted. Every available vehicle had been pressed into service to carry the people to preaching in the country. The hotel man, after serving a tempting bill of fare, did all he could to get up a team. but failed. The writer, in company with Mr. R. W. Finlator, made the rounds of the town without success until we found that prince of gentlemen and sterling citizen Mr. M. J. Reitzel. In a few moments he hitched up his excellent family horse and we were soon "happy on the way" to Franklinsville. Mr. Patterson, a good citizen, went along with another buggy and carried a driver to take Mr. Reitzel's team back to Liberty.

We found a hospitable home with Mr. Finlator's Aunt Lumsden, where we spent a pleasant night. Along this Deep River section of Randolph are some of her best, most thrifty and prosperous citizens. With magnificent and beautiful surroundings and abundant water-power the numerous cotton mills along the river are doing well and the operatives seem contented

We anticipated a visit to what is known as "Faith Rock" but the increasing rain deprived us of the pleasure. That rock, tradition says, is the spot where, in revolutionary times, a man named Hunter, who was condemned to be shot by the Tories, by a little manoevering, mounted Col. Fanning's horse and escaped, riding the surface of this rock at an angle of forty-five degrees, plunged into the swollen stream, swam across and escaped, afte wards fighting under Gen. Greene at the memorable battle of Guilford Court House.

These are matters of history, tradition only fixing the place where Hunter's daring leap for life was made.

A THEFT IN JAIL.

A Prisoner Steals and Conceals from Fellow Prisoner.

A thief in jail is not a strange sight but a theft in jail is an unusual occurrence. A case of this kind has been brought to light in this city. About three weeks ago several prisoners were confined in the same cell and one day a federal prisoner who had been sentenced to the penitentiary for one year reported to the jailer that one of his fellow prisoners had stolen fifteen dollars and a gold ring from him.

Every prisoner in jail was immediately searched but money and ring were not found. They were scarched a second time with the same result and the jailer then thought the prisoner

Lon Smith, who was in the cell, told that Will Harris had stolen the monev, a ten and a five dollar bill, which he placed in a smallcrack and covered the crack at that place with soap. Soon afterwards the cell was whitewashed and this concealed the crack entirely. Just before his trial Smith says Harris removed the money with a wire. When the men were searched Harris dashed the ring through a window and it was afterwards found in the jail

Harris was charged with stealing a coat from a negro here. Immediately after his acquittal he left town and has not since been seen, but if he is caught this case will doubtless go hard

C.

Mr. H. G. Moore, an uncle of the deceased, was on his way to Port Royal in answer to a message that young Barber was critically ill, but the grim messenger, death, reached the fevered cot first, and when Mr. Moore arrived he found only the lifeless form of the brave young man who left his home and friends for his country's honor.

How Sam Lucas Spends His Time in

Sam Lucas, the murderer of Henry Wood, now occupies a comparatively comfortable cell in jail. Today his wife sent him two quilts, a pillow, some shirts and pants, a looking glass and a number of dishes. His meals are prepared at O'Connor's restaurant and paid for by his wife.

A Telegram reporter went to his cell with the jailor this morning when he carried the quilts, et . Sam was sitting by the window reading the Bible and said when he heard the locks on his cell door click, he thought was frightened. Although he has appealed he seems to have a little hope He was asked no questions and said very little except a few words to the jailer about having his cell cleaned up and when the jailer promised that this should be done he re-opened his Bible took his seat and again began to Sad Fate of a Conductor Who Interfered to Prevent a Fight.

Macon, Ga., August 27-A special to the Macon Telegraph from Dupont, Ga., says that onductor Cason, of the Plant system, was shot and killed at that place yesterday by Mark Graham, a negro. Cason had taken a month's vacation, and was on his way to South Carolina, where he was to have been married.
