Having a Big Time.

J. F. Jordan, who accompanied the party of fox hunters to Manchester, returned home yesterday afternoon. He brought with him a good sized fox which was caught after a lively chase. He says the hunters are having a fine time. Mr. Hudson, one of the party, ordered some oysters and crackers to be sent him today. This fact will no doubt lend to the desire of the rest of our Reynard chasers to take part in Attempt Burglary.

A futle attempt to breaks into Vuncannon & Co's. store, on South Elm street, was made last night. The would-be burglars only succeeded in breaking the foot-latch off the front door, evidently using a chisel to do the work. This was very little headway, as Mr. Vunconnon has three heavy locks on the door, which is further strengthened by heavy bars.

With Parental Consent.

Mr. Luther Morefield and Miss Annie Hood, who came here yesterday from Danville, were married at 10 o'clock last night at the residence of Rev. L. Johnson who officiated. > The committee on commerce resumed its consideration of the river and harsession from 10 o'clock in the morning until twelve o'clock and then took a recess until two o'clock, remaining in session during the afternoon for some time. During the day many senators appeared before the committee to urge additional items in which they are interested. So far as could be learned neither of the North Carolina senators have yet appeared before the senate committee, but as stated it is expected that Senator Pritchard will be given a hearing, if he desires it The hearings will close with the adjournment of the committee this evening, and the work hereafter will be directed towards perfecting the bill. The house bill will be adopted by the committee as the basis, and amendments which the committee desires to incorporate will be added. The bills have been reported favorably from the committee of the whole, and will probably go through with the remainder of the bills reported. The fate of these bills in the senate is doubtful. There are a large number of public building bills involved, effecting, it was stated by Mr. Mercer, of Nebraska, chairman of the house committee, thirtyeight states of the Union. If the time of the session remaining were not so short, there is no doubt but the senate would pass the bills promptly, but with adjournment so close at hand, only twenty-five days, and the rush of bills coming over from the house daily becoming larger, there is much doubt felt as to whether the senate

SIDE TRACKED.

As Seen By an Apt Critic in Atlanta

Last Week. The capacity of the grand opera house was taxed to its utmost last night, hundreds of people being unable to gain admittance. The attraction was the ever popular comedy, Side Tracked, which, like good wine, grows better with each succeeding season. The reception given the company was an ovation, each of the old favorites receiving a hearty recognition. Mr. E. H O'Conor, with his inimitable characterization of the funny tramp, installed himself more firmly than ever in the hearts of his auditors, his work with the vivacious soubrette, Miss Gertrude Barnes, being particularly pleasing. She is one of the brightest little women on the stage. Billy Bowers, as Fritz Grabholt, gave an artistic representation of the guileless German and divided honors with Mr. W. Healy, the policeman, in a very clever specialty. There are many new features in the performance this season and each in turn received merited recognition in the way of applause and encores galore. All the specialties were original and strictly up-to-date. There was not a bad feature or mediocre number in the whole performance. Miss Cecile Lorraine rendered a very fine operatic selection, "I love you so," and responded to a hearty encore in a way which proves her a talented vocalist in addition to her dramatic ability. A patriotic trio in the picturesque national colors of the United States, Great Britain and Cuba, received the hearty approbation of the audience. In fact the entire company gave evidence that they can sing as well as act, and kept their auditors in a constant good humor through a very enjoyable evening. Side Tracked is constructed to amuse, and if anyone wishes to see pretty girls, fine cos-
