Symptoms

Of Defective Vision

Many persons have the idea that defective vision manifests itself only in a failure of inability to see clearly, but itching, burning, smarting of the lids, dull pains in the eyes or head, even the back of the head, all come from irregularities in the optical construction of the eyes and may be entirely relieved by correctly fitted glasses.

DR. J. T. JOHNSON Guarantees to correct every case that he undertakes. If your eyes are giving annoyance consult him at once.

THE PROSPEROUS SOUTH.

Been Passing Through an Experimental Period.

Mr. John E. Searles, of New York, and Mr. R. H. Edmonds, of Baltimore, who are in Charlotte last week on their return trip, which covered 7,000 miles and embraced the west and south, reached Baltimore last Friday, and Mr. Searles gave the Sun, of that city, an exceedingly interesting interview with regard to his observations and impressions. We copy from it as follows:

"The south," said Mr. Searles, "has for ten years been passing through an experimental period, in which the mettle of the people and the inherent strength of its position have been undergoing a test. Both have stood the ordeal and demonstrated to the business world the soundness of the whole southern situation. The south is a country of such remarkable natural advantages that it would seem to offer the broadest opportunities for extensive operations in the development of its mineral and timber wealth and the extension of its railroad facilities."

"When the very remarkable combination of advantages possessed by the south in coal, iron, timber and cotton, without counting all of the less striking resources of phosphates, marbles, granites, etc., is taken into account, I can readily believe, as Mr. Edmonds has often said to me, that there is no other country in the world which can duplicate its wealth. Other countries have some of these advantages; some have iron and coal, some have timber, some marbles and granites, but I believe it is fair to say that no other region of the world has them all concentrated in such wealth-creating magnitude as the south."

"Given these resources, and with a favorable climate and a productive soil, both of which the South enjoys, there ought not to be any limit to the possible profitable development of the country. If England could create its enormous industrial interests, based largely on imported cotton and iron ore, and spending, as she does, about $750,000,000 a year for bread-stuffs; if New England, with but few natural advantages, could, by the great energy of its people and the force of circumstances, build up its marvellous industrial prosperity, based upon imported coal, imported iron and imported cotton, what may we not expect of the South now that it has fairly entered upon the broad development of its mineral wealth and its cotton and lumber manufactures?"

"A careful study of the business conditions of that whole section, of the spirit of the people, of the splendid progress already made in cotton manufacturing, of the truly marvellous iron and steel-making advantages, as illustrated in Birmingham—and remembering that while Birmingham is necessarily destined to be one of the world's leading metallurgical centers, there are many other points where iron and steel can be profitably manufactured, thus giving assurance of the upbuilding of many other iron cities as the work of development goes on—remembering all these facts, the thoughtful student of business conditions must see that the South has an exceedingly bright future."

"This is considerably less than half of the interview. Mr. Searles speaks in detail of the iron interest about Birmingham, of the cotton manufacturing interest of the south, and of the plans of the American Cotton Company, with the advantages of the cylindrical bale. "Looking," says he, "over the whole situation, as I have tried to do, and appreciating something of what the south has already accomplished, and what its many advantages are, I am thoroughly convinced that there are great opportunities in that section for broad and comprehensive development."

No Northern observer has lately given the South more reason for encouragement than has Mr. Searles in this interview.—Charlotte Observer.

THE PACIFIC CANAL AMENDMENT

Failed to Pass, but Will be Earnestly Pressed During the Next Congress—As to Wheelers Pay

Special to THE TELEGRAM.

Washington, Mar. 10—Southern members of congress still in Washington, say that the Pacific cable amendment, which failed during the last days of the session just closed, will almost certainly be enacted into law at the long session, when there will be more time for its consideration. Senator Butler, of North Carolina, who introduced the bill for the building of the cable says that he will press the subject earnestly to the attention of the senate during the next congress, and he thinks there is no doubt but that the construction of the cable will be authorized. Southern members of congress, including Senators Pritchard, of North Carolina, Daniel and Martin, of Virginia, Morgan and Pettus, of Alabama, Money and Sullivan, of Mississippi, and others, are favorable to the construction of a cable across the Pacific to Honolulu.

Senator Morgan, of Alabama, who so successfully championed the Nicaraguan canal through the senate, believes that the improvements go hand in hand, and constitute the greatest and most important public works presented to congress for many years. The senator, as one of the Hawaiian commissioners is familiar with the subject, and says he thinks the cable will become an absolute necessity, and the senator has no doubt but congress will authorize its construction. Had there been more time to properly consider the matter during the short session, he believes there would have been no doubt of both houses of congress giving their sanction to the cable proposed.

Senator Pritchard, who has been in Washington since the adjournment of the senate and house, in speaking up for the subject the other day said that at the next session he would support the bill of his colleague, for he regards the cable as being of the utmost importance.

Senator Sullivan, of Mississippi, who is also in Washington, expresses himself as favorable to the construction of the cable.

The failure of the bill introduced by Mr. Kit bin for the erection of a public building at Durham, North Carolina, which was earnestly advocated by the members of the North Carolina delegation, is a disappointment. Senator Pritchard stated the other day that the bill would again come before the next congress, and he thinks that Durham will then be provided for. The senator said there was no more reason for refusing to appropriate money for Durham's public building than would have been for two-thirds of the bills for public buildings in other towns which went through both houses without opposition.

There are a large number of applications on file at the war department for the lieutenantcies apportioned to North Carolina. It is the impression at the war department that the appointments will be made from the officers of the volunteer army, although the president is not limited in his choice, and if he sees fit can make the appointments from civil life.

In connection with the refusal of Speaker Reed to sign the pay warrant for General Wheeler, attention is called to the fact that Wheeler has refused to accept pay as a member of congress ever since he accepted a commission in the volunteer army, although every other member who held a commission has not been backward in drawing his salary from the treasury.

James Whitcomb Riley, the Indiana poet, was in Washington last Wednesday. He left that night for Norfolk, where he had an engagement, and will then proceed to Richmond, returning to Washington, where he fills an engagement Monday night.

Ex-Representative Pearson, of North Carolina, called at the White House yesterday afternoon for the purpose of asking for an appointment as Lieutenant for William D. Pritchard, a son of Senator Pritchard, who is now an officer in the First Regiment of Immunes. Mr. Pearson was successful, and soon after he left the White House orders were sent to the War Department to issue the commission to Lieutenant Pritchard.

New Postoffice has been established at Newdale, Yancey county, North Carolina, Harriet Young commissioned Postmistress.

THE BRITISH GUARDS BAND.

Their Appearance at the College Last Night a Great Event.

The concert by the British Guards Band, at Greensboro Female College last night, was a musical event in this city. Lieutenant Dan Godfrey directs a band of rare excellence and the rendition of well known compositions seemed well nigh perfect. A refined audience, of between six and eight hundred people, attended the concert and time after time twice as many hands were set a-going making a heart-applause.

The band is said to have twenty-two soloists, though, of course, all this number is heard at no one performance. The flute solo by Mr. Redfern was pronounced by many to be the grandest they had ever heard.

Among the most enjoyable pieces rendered by the band were "The Drummer's Dilemma" arranged by Mr. Byrne, who played the difficult part. He used twelve instruments, the band not slacking in the least for him to exchange, though he seemed always ready and waiting and received one of the most enthusiastic encores of the evening.

"England and America" a sort of medley arranged by Lieut. Godfrey, from the patriotic airs of both nations was rendered, for the third time, in the most perfect manner and was, of course, fine. When the band struck "Dixie" hands and feet were not almost every throat, the noise almost drowning the music for awhile. Dan Godfrey's appearance here will be long remembered and Greensboro is glad of having had him. The band left this morning for Charlotte where they appear tonight.
