Women in Stock Speculations.

Baltimore Sun. In an interview with a reporter Mr. J. J. Hill, in speaking of the wild excitement in Wall Street the other day and its deplorable results, said:

"I expect before long that people will stop selling that which they haven't got and can't get, and then we'll get down to a satisfactory business basis. Selling what you haven't got and can't get is a method of gambling far more dangerous and hurtful to the public morals and welfare than any other game of chance. It has been observed that in all the excitement and panic and inflation and collapse of values there has been not one important failure. Commenting on this fact, a writer in a New York paper declares that although this is true the loss has been as severe as that which took place on Black Friday, thirty-two years ago. The difference then was that rich banking firms failed in rapid succession, and this time it is the small fortunes that have been wiped out. Thousands of men and women who deemed it easy to get rich quick ventured all they had and lost all. A few unloaded in time, but the great number of them were in the crash. Havoc was wrought with the savings of bank clerks, office boys, typewriters and bookkeepers. One of the saddest features of the whole miserable business is that so many women succumbed to the spirit of gambling and lost all they had. Many had borrowed money to bet with and lost it. The scenes in the offices of some of the offices of the brokers were pitiful. Great numbers of women would be standing around the tickers watching prices going down and their money slipping away from them, in many cases all they had. Their grief was extreme and uncontrollable.

In the modern civilization of cities money stands for so much and means so much that the greed of gain is the master passion. Women need money to gratify their social ambition and men want wealth for the importance it gives them. The acquisition by ordinary work or through the usual vocations of life is too slow. It takes a lifetime to grow rich by such means, and no one wants to wait. Few are contented with what they have, and the easiest and quickest way to get money is to take it away from someone else without giving him anything in return. This can be accomplished quickly and more respectably, in the public estimation, by stock gambling than at the faro table, but in point of morals there is no manner of difference. That women should take to gambling or stock jobbing and speculating is worse than for men to engage in such business, just as it is worse for women to drink whiskey than for men to drink. A woman is more nervous than a man, more excited by winning and more likely to be driven to despair by losses, and hence for their own happiness and for the sake of the homethey should keep out of gambling as they would keep away from an accursed thing.

TO LET N. P. PREFERRED ALONE.

Dr. Smith's Book.

The pastor of the First Presbyterian church in one of our largest Southern cities writes concerning the "Creed of Presbyterians." "I read your book through at one sitting, devouring every sentence. It will have a large sale and will be recognized as the best of its kind. Had I been permitted to hear a sermon on two like the last chapter of your book, when I was a student at college, it would have solved my doubt, and difficulties, and saved me from years of wandering and dissatisfaction."

A Sunday Marriage.

Dr. Egbert Smith was visited yesterday morning about nine o'clock by a couple from Revolution Mills, who wished to be united in matrimony, and the Doctor obliged them in his very best manner. The names of the contracting parties are Mr. Clemie Cox and Miss M. Alice Dodson.

Minstrel Friday Night.

The Greensboro Lodge of Elks are preparing to have a minstrel performance in the Academy of Music next Friday night. Winston talent will produce the show, and it is said that there is splendid talent in the cast.

THE WEATHER.

For North Carolina—Fair tonight and Tuesday fresh northwest winds. Greensboro—Highest temperature past twenty-four hours ending eight o'clock this morning 77, lowest 60. Highest temperature Saturday last 77, lowest Saturday night 57.

THE RIVERSIDE STRIKE.

Has Been On For 38 Days—Business Men Feeling It.

Danville, Va., May 11.—The strike of the operatives of the Riverside Cotton Mills for the 10-hour system is still on, and the textile union officials state they are bound to win, although it is the opinion of many the backbone of the strike has been broken by so many of them returning to work. At least 500 have done so. The mill officials decline to talk, and Mr. F. X. Burton, the president, in reply to an inquiry if the mills would take all the strikers back who wished to accept the 11-hour system, stated that they left on their own accord and could return in the same manner, as the mills were not soliciting operatives at the present. It is estimated that about 1,500 people are still on the strike, but the list is growing smaller day by day, and that merchants are losing is evidenced by many of them cutting off part of their force, offering them their situations back when the strike closes. The strike has been on for 38 days.

NOW OUT OF A JOB.

Stenographer Offered to Sell Private Papers in the Neely Case and Was Neatly Trapped.

Washington, May 11.—An attempt to sell the confidential communications between the Attorney General and the Secretary of War, in the Neely case, was unearthed today by Chief Wilkie of the secret service. Information had been obtained from John D. Lindsay, counsel for Neely, in New York, who had received a letter signed "John B. Dickenson," offering him copies of the correspondence. Mr. Lindsay turned the matter over to the Attorney General and the latter placed the case in the hands of Chief Wilkie.

An officer was stationed at the general delivery window of the local post-office, and when a man presented himself and asked for mail for John B. Dickenson he was followed. He went to the insular division of the War Department. Shortly afterwards a conference was held between the Secretary of War, Solicitor General Richards, of the Department of Justice; Colonel Edwards, chief of the insular bureau, and Chief Wilkie. It was discovered that the man representing himself as John B. Dickenson was Wm. Davis Williams, a stenographer to Colonel Edwards, a position which he had held for a year past. He at one time was private secretary to ex-Congressman Brumm, of Pennsylvania, and came here from Minnersville, Pa. Williams volunteered to turn the correspondence that he had attempted to sell to Lindsay over to the officials here. As the sale of the correspondence had not been completed no charge was made against Williams, but he was summarily dismissed by the Secretary of War.

The papers which Williams desired to sell to Mr. Lindsay consisted of the draft of the opinion of the Attorney General upon questions submitted by Mr. Lindsay, relative to requisition testimony in the Neely case. The opinion was prepared by an assistant attorney familiar with the Neely case, and submitted to Secretary Root for consideration and observation. There also was a letter from Secretary Root to the Attorney General. These papers Williams offered for $200.

CLEANED OUT BUCKET SHOP Man Wanted the Money He Won and Got it With a Shotgun.

Pittsburg, Pa., Dispatch, 10th. William Bradburn, former champion heavyweight pugilist of Illinois and brother of James Bradburn, of Chicago once chief cattle buyer for Armour & Co., created a stampede today in a Pittsburg bucket shop with a loaded shotgun. He had been dealing in July corn in the East End branch of A. B. Baxter & Co., bucket shop men, and yesterday he closed out his trades and found himself $800 to the good. Bradburn asked for his money and was told that he would have to get it at the main office down town. He called there in the afternoon and was informed, so he says, that the firm did not consider itself responsible for the East End house's debts.

"I'll give you till tomorrow to settle," said Bradburn.

This morning Bradburn called again and approached the desk, but was waved aside and told not to begin the subject again. He walked away, bought a $50 shotgun, put in two shells loaded with buckshot and went back to Baxter's. The room was crowded and there was a general stampede of customers. Left alone with Baxter and his partner Bradburn pointed his gun and gave them ten minutes to count out $800. The money was counted down and Bradburn pocketed it just as a patrol wagon load of policemen brought by a riot call arrived.

Bradburn gave himself up and deposited $40 as a forfeit for his appearance tomorrow at a hearing for disorderly conduct. Baxter says he will not prosecute the man.
