Responsibility of Mistress Toward Her Maids.

Rev. Alden W. Quimby, in the June Forum, gives some very judicious advice to the mistresses of the home. He says:

It would be very unjust not to remark that there are many homes of wealth in which the helpers receive fine consideration, and in which much of the discomfort of "the gulf" is smoothed away by kindness and thoughtfulness. But those homes are few indeed in which some evidence of the stigma of servitude, at least its badge, is not recognized. Remove that, and the new era will have dawned.

The maid is the ward of the mistress and she must share in the homliness of the home, which is the focus of human society. The mistress cannot conscientiously deal with her as if she were purchasing a pound of tea. She cannot evade a certain rsponsibility growing out of her personality. She should clearly know the locality of the home of her maid, and something about the family and its circumstances and she should take care to inquire courteously from time to time after either in such quantities as you find | its health and happiness. It is not necessary for the mistress to confide private matters to her maid, or, per contra, for the maid to her mistress. Strangely enough, mistresses have often made their girls confidents in respects most unwise, and have heaped trouble as the result. Such familiarity is fatal, and must be deplored. Yet a good measure of frank and intimate correspondence may be indulged where a sufficiently long acquaintance and mutual esteem suggest and prompt it. Still there are matters which should never be ventured upon.

There is really no little responsibility resting upon the employer. It is hers to train her maid in the best aspects of housekeeping, to advise her in the matter of dress and personal appearance, to watch over her friendship, to train her mind, and to help in the development of her moral character. Justice is to be shown in the arrangement of hours of service, and provision made for the proper amount of recreation. Church privileges are to be borne in mind, also occasional midweek social privileges. If the house keeper feels appalled at such a vista of duty. It can only be said that this is but an illustration of the obligations that accompany possession. The little whitewashed log cottage on the hillside has few expenses associated with it, but our responsibilities grow in proportion to our acquisitions. It is a day of advance in many respects. There are cooking and sewing schools and various other institutions for the promotion of household interests. Let the best of these privileges be utilized to the utmost and their products be brought as tributes to the home.

There is one word of almost magical influence that needs to be whispered in connection with the theme of housekeeping. It is system! Without it, success is doubtful; with it, failure cannot ensue. There must be system for all work, system for hours, system in promptness, system for occupation, and system for recreation, system in the rigorous observance of hours of rest and sleep, and system in the hours of rising. When possible, a girl should have in her own right a bright, well-ventilated room, capable of being made comfortable in the winter. Attention to this will react in advantage to the employer. Whatever taste the latter expends upon her maid's apartment is an investment sure to result usuriously to herself.

Mr. McDiarmid is a prominent lumber dealer of Fayetteville, being a member of the McDiarmid Lumber Company. His bride is the eldest daughter of Rev. C. W. Robinson, a Presbyterian minister of Wilkesboro. The following account of their marriage is taken from the Wilkesboro correspondence of the Charlotte Observer:

One of the most beautiful and impressive ceremonies ever witnessed in this place was performed in the Presbyterian church this morning at 11 o'clock, when Mr. J. C. McDiarmid, of Fayettevile, led Miss Katherine, the eldest daughter of Rev. and Mrs. C. W Robinson, to the altar. The short but impressive ceremony was performed by the bride's father. The bride was dressed in white organdie over white silk, the veil was caught with a pearl and diamond brooch, a gift of the groom, and she carried bride's roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Nan Fairly, of Fayetteville, wore white organdie and carried American beauty roses. Dr. A. S. Rose, of Fayetteville, was best man, while Mesrs. J. T. Finley and T. J. Robertson were the ushers. The church was handsomely decorated, the blinds closed and brilliantly lighted. Mrs. A. A. Finley presided at the piano. # Bucket Shops Driven Out.

New York June 4.-According to Charles H. Treat, colector of internal revenue for the Second district, more than 100 bucket shops have been driven out of business by the restrictions imposed on them in the amended war revenue bill passed last March, while those that still exist in the city have so changed their methods of business as to observe the letter if not the spirit of the law.

Mr. Treat's office made a list of all the bucket shop proprietors in the city and submitted it to the officers of the several exchanges for verification. In this way the list was made as free from error as possible.

JEALOUS LOVERS SHOOT.

Each Tried to Outstay the Other -Failing, Each Drew His Gun

Jeffersonville, Ind., June 6.—In trying to out stay each other, at the home of Miss Rose Moore, with whom both were in love, the feeling between Thomas True and Floyd Nelson grew high. #### Law and Belief.

New York Tribune.

Adherents of the faith cure doctrine will learn something to their advantage if they will read, with an open mind, the remarks of Judge Lent, of Westchester, in passing sentence upon one of their belief who failed to call a doctor to treat his two-year-old daughter, ill with pneumonia. 'The trouble with you," said Judge Lent,"is that? you take the ground that you are all right, despite the laws of the state." Here lies the whole trouble so far as the public is concerned. Nobody objects to the beliefs of the faith curists. Christian Scientists and their kind. They have a perfect right to believe what they like. It is a free country. One may believe the moon is made of green cheese, if he wishes. He may call something science, though there may be nothing scientific about it, and Christian, though it may have little or nothing to do with the life or words of the Great Teacher. That is his privilege, because it has long been adjudged against public policy to interfere in such matters.

But freedom of thought and opinion does not include license to violate the laws of the state. This is a point which some persons seem to pass over, to their hurt. The law requires that a man shall take care of those dependent upon him, and if he neglects them, the law will punish him. Views may differ as to what constitutes neglect. but the views taken by the law will prevail until the law is changed, and all men must abide by it, whatever their belief may be. The man whom Judge Lent sentenced said that he would not pay his fine, but would "stand by his faith," by which he meant that he would go to jail. But, of course, nobody asked him to recant his faith. Like other citizens, many of them of widely varied forms of belief or non-belief, he was simply asked to obey the law of the state. It was not in the least necessary for him to approve it, but obey he must, and reasonable beings will not account him a martyr to his faith for going to jail. He will simply be acting a foolish part, and faliing a victim to his own folly.

Battle in a Cab With Burglars.

Toronto, Ont., June 4.-Frank Rutledge, Fred Rice, and Frank Jones, three alleged bank robbers, extradited from Chicago on trial here for robbery of a private bank at Aurora, were being transferred from the court room to the jail tonight in a cab in which were Police Officers Boyd and Stewart. The three prisoners were handcuffed together. When the rig was approach-. ing the jail, an unknown person threw three loaded revolvers into the cab. Jones grabbed one of the pistols and shot Officer Boyd, who died in a few minutes. Officer Stewart open fire on Jones, shotting him in the arm and

The prisoners then leaped from the cab, and boarding a passing street car, ordered the motorman to proceed faster. The latter removed the arm of the motor and struck Rutledge (ver) head, while the conductor threw off the trolley pole from the wire, bringing the car to a standstill. The men were the neverpowered. Jones is in the hospital and will lose his arm if he recovers.
