EX. GOV. PINGREE DYING.

His Wife and Daughter Telegraphed to Not Come.

By Wire to The Telegram.

London, June 18.—Hazen S. Pingree, ex-Governor of Michigan, is dying at the Grand Hotel. He has been ill more than a week with acute peritonitis and dysentery. All efforts to break the disease are in vain. During the night Mr. Pingree's condition took a turn for the worse, and it was announced this afternoon that no hope for his recovery remained. His son has been at the Governor's bedside through the night and today. It is believed that the end is not far off. Mrs. Pingree and daughter have been cabled not to come. They had hoped to reach the Governor's bed side before the end, and were to sail from New York on Wednesday. The doctors decided today that the trip would be in vain as the Governor is fast nearing his end.

The mayor had a small docket yesterday. Among other cases disposed of was Ike Dean, assault, $12; Ed Wynne, larceny, bound over to court; George Wells, disorderly conduct, $7.90. Sam Harvey, drunk, $2.30.

Several young men of the city also appeared before the mayor charged with being drunk and disorderly on the streets. Their names are withheld on account of their families. They were given a lecture by the mayor and promised to not repeat the offense. A small fine was also imposed upon each of them.

THE EDUCATION OF THE NEGRO.

VIRGINIA DELEGATE THINKS IT IS OVERDONE IN THIS STATE.

Author of the Famous Nottoway Resolutions, that Have Figured in Virginia Politics, Explains the Status South of James River.

Washington Post.

Richmond, Va., June 15.—Comfortably ensconced in a corner of the lobby at Murphy's were two delegates to the constitutional convention from the section south of the James River who represent ideas bound to be forcibly presented before final is written on the important work of that body. The younger was Delegate Walter A. Watson, of Nottoway, who came to the State senate ten years ago at the age of twenty-four, hardly more than a boy in appearance, but now recognized in spite of his being one of the junior members of the convention, as having great intellectual power. He was the author of the Nottoway resolutions, already famous in the politics of Virginia, which precipitated the constitutional convention as an issue by vote of the May convention in Norfolk last year. Smooth shaven, compact in figure, a student of history, and possessed of an unusual command of good English, he is the opposite in many regards of his close friends, Dr. Thos. Barnes, of Nansmond, tall, angular, now past the meridian of life, quaint, but keen in conversation, and well versed in public affairs.

"To our people economy in government expenses is not the chief question in this convention," said Mr. Watson. "The sentiment is strong for restriction of suffrage, and I believe that sentiment will be respected by the delegates who are to frame a new constitution. The demand for it throughout Virginia is greater than many suppose at this time.

"Personally, I would like to see the plowshare go deeper down into the subsoil, but I recognize that what the convention may decide to do will be less radical than what the people in my own locality favor. There is a much stronger determination in the convention to restrict suffrage than appears on the surface, because most of the delegates have refrained generally from expressing their views on subjects that they will have to pass upon officially.

"An educational qualification would be only a temporary solution of this race problem," continued Mr. Watson. "To the negro, education is a different thing than to a white. It is a fetish or talisman, and he seeks to read and write not that he may remain in the fields and work intelligently, but that he may go away to the city and live by his wits. I have been Commonwealth's attorney in my county for five years, and I assure you a very large proportion of the negroes I have prosecuted for crime can read and write. I mean to inquire of the warden over here in our penitentiary how many of the colored convicts there are illiterate. I will wager that there are very few of them, indeed.

"The present system of negro education is all wrong, and the taxes of the white people go to support it. The small farmers of Virginia, as is well known, pay the bulk of the taxes. On them falls the burden of supporting our state government. But the taxes for school purposes are not paid chiefly for white schools; a large portion goes to the colored schools. The white farmer takes his children out of school at an early age to help him in planting his crops and in doing other light work; the negro children are pushed in the schools to gain an elementary education, not along practical lines, that would make them more useful, but to possess the accomplishment of knowing how to read and write."

"Do you mean to say that that is not beneficial to the negro?" was asked of Mr. Watson.

"The kind of instruction they get is wrong," he replied. "Children of the lowest class of negroes are sent to school to be taught by others of the same class, and the learning they acquire helps them but little. More often it does harm. You find few educated negroes working on the farms in Nottoway, owned by white men. A few are dawdling along on land of

ATLANTA SPECIAL WRECKED.

A SEABOARD AIR LINE TRESTLE GIVES WAY UNDER IT.

Several Passengers Quite Badly Hurt but No One Was Killed—The Accident Occurred Near Rockingham Sunday Night

Hamlet, N. C., June 17.—Last night about 10 o'clock, the northbound Seaboard Air Line Atlanta special turned broadside off a trestle into a pond about a mile north of Rockingham. There were on board about 25 or 30 passengers, all of whom were more or less injured, several very seriously, and two, a white man and a negro, probably fatally. There were three ladies and some children aboard, none of whom were seriously hurt.

The engine and two mail cars passed over in safety, but the combination baggage and second, first-class and two Pullmans turned over. On account of the rains the piers of the trestle gave way on the left side. At the first crash all lights went out and water rushed in waist deep through the windows. Baggage-master Smith, though seriously hurt himself, at once thought of the freight following close behind. He crawled out, and seizing a lantern, hobbled down the track and flagged the freight, thereby preventing a second catastrophe. When the freight stopped he was lying on the ground unable to rise, but still waving his lantern. He fell time and time again before he succeeded in getting far enough back to flag the train. He had to be carried back on a stretcher.

The newsboy also did heroic work, crawling through the cars helping the passengers through the transom. A relief train came with doctors, and another from Rockingham. The hotel was turned into a temporary hospital.

THEY ARE BRITISH SHIPS.

Purchase of Foreign Craft by Americans Does Not Americanize Them.

Philadelphia Press.

President Search of the National Manufacturers' Association, made use of a happy illustration in ridiculing the talk about the Leyland Line becoming American because a controlling interest in it has been purchased by American capitalists. If the Leyland Line is American, under such circumstances, then the American railroads in which foreigners own controlling interest are foreign roads. The controlling interest in the Erie Railroad was long held in England, but no one would have been foolish enough to call it a British railroad. And the same thing was true of other railroads.

The Leyland Line is a British line, sailing under the British flag and manned by British crews. As Mr. Search remarked, it is in no sense an American line or helpful to the American merchant marine. The British newspapers are beginning to rejoice in the American purchase of the stock of the Leyland Line. The Iron and Coal Trade Review, of London, says:

"If these ships had not been bought here on American account, others would probably have been built in the United States by American workmen with American steel, and this country would have been a loser of both, where she is now a gainer. American shipping development on the ocean is bound to come, and the more it comes in this way the better we shall be pleased."

This is the truth of the matter. The more the United States develops its shipping by investing money in British lines the better the Britishers will be pleased. But the Americans intend to have ships of their own built in American yards and manned by American crews.

Sad Case of Lunacy.

Charlotte News.

A very distressing case of lunacy comes from Clear Creek near the Surface Hill Mine. One day last week Frances Morgan, a daughter of Mrs. Jane Morgan, went suddenly deranged while working in the field and is now a raving maniac. The girl was apparently in her usual mind when she left the house in the morning. She attracted the attention of those working near her in the field by screaming. Several ran to her, but she was so violent that they could do nothing with her for some time. She was finally overcome and taken back to her home. She seized an axe lying in the yard and attempted to kill one of the neighbors. She is kept tied. An effort will be made to get her in the asylum. No one can account for her sudden derangement.

Her screams can be heard for half a mile.
