GREENVILLE, N. C.

Morgan, Rockefeller of Carnegie envisions.

The old clothes man "saves the scraps. He makes new things out of old. He cleans up the battlefields and camps and very little is wasted nowadays. His job is to collect anything from a horseshoe nail to a disordered siege-gun and put it back into commission.

Brass objects which have lost their usefulness are melted into ingots, cast-iron junk becomes pig-iron again; bronze, tin, steel, nickel and everything of the kind which has irretrievably lost its shape is put into the melting pots to be born again in another guise keeping up an eternal transmigration but serving all the while.

I recently visited one of these scrapping and repair shops. About 12,000 people are employed, mostly French women and girls.

Here great howitzers are repaired and government chronometers have their hair springs readjusted; tents are patched and mended and covers are made for steel helmets; artillery wheels are repaired and micrometers put true again. There is a wood-working shop, a foundry for running brass, bronze, zinc, tin and iron; a boot repair department, a great machine shop; a gas mask repair department and many others.

In one room there were hundreds and hundreds of rifles.

"This is one day's arrivals," the commanding officer explained. "By tonight the room must be cleared to make room for tomorrow's arrivals."

Many of the rifles were muddy and rusty as though picked out of the mud on the battlefield. Women were cleaning these. In one corner a soldier was rhythmically swinging the rifles upon by one to a rest and sninting through the barrels at a light to see if they were bent or if the rifling was damaged. The officer explained this was obviously the first bit of inspection because it would be a waste of time to repair other parts of the rifle if the barrel was damaged.

These rifles pass on down the line. When they reach the end they are as good as new and after being oiled are packed in boxes and shipped back to the front.

BATTLEFIELD JUNK BEING RECLAIMED

By WILLIAM PHILLIP SIMMS (United Press Staff Correspondent).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES AFIELD.—(By Mail)—Did you ever stop to think what becomes of all worn out equipment of an army composed of millions of men?

At the outset of the present war much of this was pre- loss. Now the British army there is an "old clothes man" and the profits he reports back to his boss, John Bull, might make that can be done with the wonderful X-Ray lights.

It can be used in locating faults in bones in any part of the body, and in that manner can detect a crook in the healing of a broken bone and thereby prevent lameness or disfigurement of the limbs. It is also equipped to take photographs of all parts of the body, and can take any size from the tiny one-inch photo to the large one 10 x 9. Then, too, it has facilities for treating by means of currents of violet rays, which are generated by the machine, all kinds of rheumatism, aches, pains, etc. It also gives an X-Ray massage.

Such a machine is a benefit to the entire county, and Dr. Fitzgerald is to be congratulated upon his progressiveness in adding it to his already well equipped office.

SURGICAL DRESSINGS SORELY NEEDED IN WASHINGTON

A letter has been sent out to every chapter of the American Red Cross in the country advising them of the great need of surgical dressings for the wounded soldiers. We have been asked to publish this letter in order that the women of the town and county will see it and put forth every effort to assist in the work. The letter is as follows:

To All Chapters:

On account of the urgent demand in Europe for surgical dressings, I request you to send at the earliest possible moment, all the available stock of dressings comprised in a class A described on page 4 and 5 R. C. 164 and pages 3 and 4 of A. R. C. 165 to the nearest branch of the American Red Cross Supply Service. Since the demand is so urgent I ask you to give this your immediate personal attention.

For your further information I give below a list of the Branch Warehouses and the territories which they serve. Eliot Wadsworth, Acting Chairman. The ladies of the local chapter ask that every woman and girl will spend some time next week helping in the work at the Red Cross work room in the Court House next week as they wish to complete the two boxes one which they are now working. The work room will be open both morning and afternoon of the four work days next week, a two weeks will have to be lost during the month of August owing to the holding of court.

Let everyone in the town of Greenville feel that she has a part to perform in the work and give some time next week in helping to hurry to completion the two boxes that are now in the making.

We Need the Money

Make THIS Your Bank

Some people are diffident about doing business through a bank because they think their business through a bank is too small for a banker to bother with.

We invite such people to come in and use this bank. We are in business purposely to be bothered.

Every man, woman and child should have a bank account of some size, and their business is very welcome here.
