A Glimpse of the Russian Peasant.

Russians are a very methodical people even in their crimes. They do not get excited when anticipating an act against the law; they just make up their minds quietly and freely, as the following story will show:

A man arrived one day at a village where he commenced to lecture that all men were equal and that no government had the right to exercise any authority. Thinking to add more power to his views, he decided to begin by disproving the existence of God.

Taking a holy ikon, or sacred picture, he said: "There is no God. I will prove it immediately. I will spit upon this ikon and break it. If there is a God he will send fire from heaven and slay me; if there is not, nothing will happen." whereupon he took the picture and carried out his threat, saying when he had done so, "You see, God has not killed me."

His audience talked quietly among themselves, for a few minutes, and then one of them got up and said, "No, God has not killed you, but we will!" And they did without the slightest compunction.—London Standard.

The Circus Business.

The people who are in the circus game are there because of the primitive, wandering call of their blood, a call that dates back for generations. Anybody who's ever been with the big tops will tell you that he hates the business. It's dirty, it's rotten, it's nerve wracking, and if he can ever get to the place where he can have a little farm and a few chickens and a couple of hogs rooting around no mud colored circus big top is ever going to see him again. But, when the bluebirds sing in the spring and the menagerie dens are bright with the paint that will remain gloriously shining until the first bad day in the mud, there he is, his eyes bulging, his whole being a-fret to "get with it" at any kind of a job from razorback to pony punk. And from the laboring class on up to the highest position that call of the blood is all the same.—Courtney Ryley Cooper in Everybody's Magazine.

Chevrons of Honor.

The French are quick to bestow symbols of honor on soldiers who perform deeds of self sacrifice or daring. More than any other of the allies, perhaps, they recognize the value of emblems of service.

Among the many neat little marks upon the French uniforms that indicate the rank and the department of the wearer, says Sir A. Conan Doyle in "A Visit to Three Fronts," there was one that puzzled me. It was to be found on the left sleeve of men of all ranks, from generals to privates, and it consisted of small gold chevrons, one, two or more. No rule seemed to regulate them, for the general might have none, and I have heard of a private who wore ten.

Suddenly I solved the mystery. The marks are the record of wounds received. By this admirable little device the French ally the smart of a wound and make it bring lasting honor to the man among his fellows.
