ATHLETICS IN CANTONMENTS

BY H. C. HAMILTON,
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK—If army camps in the east and south are going in strong for athletics there isn't a word strong enough to express what Camp Lewis, at American Lake, Wash., is doing.

Aside from having one of the best boxing instructors obtainable, a basketball coach of more than ordinary standing in the athletic world, Capt. T. G. Cook, who directs sports at this camp, claims Camp Lewis has the finest athletic field in the northwest—and that is for track and kindred sports alone. The camp boasts twelve football fields, fitted with goalposts and seating accommodations. Six athletic fields have been laid off, in addition sixteen baseball diamonds have been constructed. There is a Y. M. C. A. auditorium which contains four basketball courts and which has a seating capacity of 3,000. There are sixteen assembly halls fitted with rings for boxing, stages for vaudeville, and various other entertainment features. The athletic field has a quarter-mile and a 220 yard straightaway track with ten lanes. Several other fields are to be constructed in the spring.

Twelve regimental football teams went through the season, six games being played every Wednesday and Sunday. A regimental fund supplies the money necessary to equip the teams.

Baseball is being played in this north-western camp, or it was until a few weeks ago. Every unit has its baseball team. A number of minor and major league players are included in the cantonment, with hundreds of former high school and college players.

Willie Ritchie, former world's lightweight champion, is the boxing instructor, and he is following out the plan found to be so successful in other camps—the lining up of a small squad of potential instructors, and giving them the fine points of the art to impart to their men. Lloyd E. Ireland, claimant of the featherweight wrestling championship of the world, is teaching the men jiu-jitsu stunts in addition to catch-as-can hold.

Proud of His Ignorance.
"Do you know anything about the stock market?" "Not a thing. That's one place where I am sure ignorance is bliss."
