THEIR'S A GREAT PRIVILEGE

What could be a greater privilege than to fight for one's country, especially for the cause America has espoused?

Thirty young men, in the bloom of health and life, of the blood and bone of Old Pitt, left yesterday for a training camp, where they will undergo discipline. At the station a large crowd of relatives and friends gathered to "see them off." Every one of these young men were willing to go—they seemed resigned to a patriotic fate, (if it be called fate) and will make good soldiers. The traditions of their forefathers will serve for them a guiding post and they will enter upon the life of military men with energy and determination. Their going away is but an incident of a day; their return (probably some may never) will be an epoch. They were in the best of spirits, nevertheless.

To each of them there is a satisfaction—that of rendering unto the flag, which protects them, all that they can. Those who leave behind them mothers and sisters, fathers and brothers, must know that their going away is regretted; yet the duty to our government acts as salt to the bread. To give them up is hard, but they go for a precious cause—for the redemption of the world from autocratic domination and the vengeance of the oppressed widow and orphan. Pitt County boys are already at the front, and they are rendering to the Country a service that is holy.

The American army is not fighting for territory or for loot or the lust of victory; they are not fighting for glory or fame; they are fighting that they may preserve for themselves and their countrymen, and that they may help all the world, including their present enemies, enjoy the blessings of government "of the people, by the people and for the people." They will go over the top. They will penetrate barbed-wire defenses, trenches, dug-outs and pill boxes. They cannot be stopped by barrages, machine guns, rifle fire or bayonets. The ideas of liberty will demoralize its enemies and convert its foes.

Already the fight for Solicitor in this district is waxing warm and the prospects are that before the primary decides who is the lucky one the race will be keen and spirited. Several candidates are now in the field. Here's hoping that the best man will win.

Remember that tomorrow is Sunday and that it is your duty to go to church. All the respective churches of the city will be open to receive you. Take your choice and be on hand at either the morning or evening service—both would be better.

FEED TICKS OR PEOPLE.

Major W. A. Graham, Commissioner of Agriculture, is to be commended for refusing to lend encouragement to the movement in certain quarters to halt the campaign against the cattle tick. As the head of the Agricultural Department in the State naturally he could not give his sanction to interference with the execution of a program which promises so much as does the cattle tick campaign.

County by county and State by State the South is delivering itself from this body of death around the neck of its cattle growing industry. Animal industry experts of all sorts are united in the belief that the right sort of campaign is being conducted. Then why should not the good work go on? Of course no good thing is ever had without some trouble and inconvenience. But the benefit that comes from expelling the cattle tick far outweighs, in the judgment of experts, the difficulty that is found in accomplishing such expulsion.

The future of North Carolina as a beef-producing State lies in part in this one single question of driving out the cattle tick. If large sections of the State remain infested with the cattle tick the beef from that section will never command the price of the products of sections which have been freed of the tick.

Shall the cattle tick have a part of our food while there is danger of all the world hungry?
