Talaat said the war had exhausted itself in its achievements and that its continuance was manifestly useless. "All our enemies, not including America," says Talaat, "will shortly come to recognize that there is no sense in continuing the hostilities."

A FINE PRESENTING COMPANY

The matter of theatrical success such as is being achieved by Elmer Walters' play, "The Soldier Who Came Back," seems to lie in the excellence of the company presenting this timely comedy drama as much as in the writing of the play itself. While the material and construction of this spy story has met with favor from critics in Norfolk, Richmond, Petersburg and Raleigh, a word about the presenting company will give added confidence in connection with the coming presentation of "The Soldier Who Came Back."

Milton Boyle, who assumes the role of Lieutenant "Bob" Wilson, has been seen with Blanche Bates in Darling of the Gods under the management of David Belasco. Clay Cody, who is seen as the master spy, has recently played many southern cities with Ben Greet Players, also with Clifford Devereau's high class repertoire playing on college grounds. Previous to last season Mr. Cody was for several seasons with Henry W. Savage's "Everywoman" and with Mrs. Fiske.

Viola Brown, who in this play is seen as "Bob's" sister, last toured the South in the company of Harry Beresford, also with Robert Hilliard.

Ethel Hamrick, the secret service "house-maid" of the play, was last season in vaudeville with Willard Mack's big act called "What Molly Knew." Willard Mack is the author of Tiger Rose, that is just finishing a solid year at the Belasco theatre, New York.

Adelaide Coudre, who so effectively portrays the "waiting" mother, is no stranger to southern theatregoers. Al. H. Wilson having claimed her services for the past three years. Miss Coudre (Mrs. Frank I. Frayne) was selected for her peculiar fitness to the role of Mrs. Wilson.

Henry Barker, who will be found as the wary butler, has made a specialty of these difficult roles for a number of seasons as a member of the Cohan and Harris forces. J. J. Urich has for five years been on the Belasco staff, while Elmer Walters Messrs. Shubert and also with John has with William A. Brady, the Cort, who has out five distinct successes this season, among them Fiddlers Three, now being presented at the Belasco theatre, Washington. Judging from the personnel of the players in "The Soldier Who Came Back" as well as from the number of indorsements given to the play by critics of sister cities together with commendable letters, the management has received from mayors of several cities a most meritorious entertainment may be looked for by this company. This company will be seen at White's theatre tonight.
