CITY MAY HAVE BIG FUTURE

Dakar, in South Africa, Promises to Develop into Something Like Another Liverpool.

The city of Dakar in South Africa, less than half a century ago in a really primitive condition, with naked children running around the streets and mothers working with babies strapped upon their backs, has suddenly come into prominence as the prospective "Liverpool" of Africa. In the keen competition that is expected between America and Europe for trade in South Africa, Dakar, it is believed, will have an important role to play.

The French are today making extensive improvements at Dakar. They have spent much money in enlarging the dry dock and making the harbor deeper as well as increasing the facilities for transferring cargo from boat to train. The Dakar of today is a thriving town of about 25,000 people, with wide well-laid-out streets, a large technical school, hospitals and workshops. There are, however, a great majority of natives, being in fact, only about 3,500 Frenchmen.

These natives have been said by some to have formerly been the masters of the Mediterranean. They are wonderful fighters and it was only with great difficulty that in 1882, Gen. Faidherbe, the French governor, was able to overcome them. Thus he paved the way for the founding of Dakar. We may know a great deal more about Practical Economy.

"Wife ever get an economical streak?"
"She does. Only this summer she figured out she could save $8 in one week by doing her own housework."
"How did it work out?"
"She got a cook book. I got dyspepsia and the doctor got the $8."
Boston Transcript.

Unavoidable.
Hub—Oh, don't worry about the cook's crankiness. Don't take any notice of her.
Wife—I have to; she's just given it.
