STILL FORTUNATE

While it is to be regretted that Colonel Sidney Minor found it impossible to be present in Greenville next Monday to deliver the memorial address to the soldier boys and join with them in paying fitting tribute to those of their comrades who sleep on the battlefields of France, congratulations are in order for the committee in selecting Capt. Wiley C. Rodman to take Colonel Minor's place on this auspicious occasion. We know Captain Rodman and know that he will fill a bill, coining a rough expression.

He, like Colonel Minor, fought for democracy's sake across the seas. He is every inch a soldier and will on Monday give the members of the Pitt county Post of the American Legion something to think about and talk about for months to come. Captain Rodman is a lawyer by profession and stands high among his legal brethren. Fortunate indeed is the American Legion in having him as their principal speaker upon the occasion of their first Memorial day. That his address on Monday will be worth while goes without saying. A rich treat awaits all who are fortunate enough to hear him.

SEVEN JOYOUS DAYS.

The campaign for the sale of Chautauqua season tickets will begin next week. There should be no trouble in disposing of these tickets this year when one stops to think what a fine program is scheduled for seven days and nights. No Chautauqua has ever visited Greenville that promises to be more attractive. Some of the best on the American stage today in the way of artists, some of the cream of American thought, are billed to appear on the program. When one reflects that for the small sum of $2.50 all of this can be seen and taken in the wonder is that the required number of tickets are not already subscribed for. Seven joyous days and nights are promised this year in Greenville by the Chautauqua. We have carefully studied the entire program and must say that if it does not please this year no Chautauqua ever will. We are looking for a great season of uplifting and wholesome entertainment.

Remember the sale for season tickets begins the coming week. Be ready for the canvassers. Don't put them off but buy right on the spot.

MORE ENCOURAGING DAILY.

The reports as to the candidacy of Senator F. C. Harding for next Lieutenant Governor of North Carolina become more encouraging daily, and unless all signs fail, he will receive a majority of the votes cast in the forthcoming primary for this high office. The voters are flocking now to his side of the fence and he is going to be heard from on June fifth. The voters should not forget that there are other state offices to be filled besides that of the governorship and in their ardor for their favorite they must also vote for the right man for the second place on the ticket. Senator Harding is in every way fully qualified and will bring to the office years of experience as a legislator. He has had the honor of representing Pitt county in the state senate for a number of years and has been honored by that body as president pro tem. He also has held some of the most important chairmanships of the Senate committees. Besides his experience as a legislator, Senator Harding is a lawyer of enviable ability, a farmer and business man. In a word, he is an all round man. North Carolina can well congratulate herself if F. C. Harding of Pitt is chosen. He will honor his constituency, he will honor the state.
