Entered at Greenville, N. C., post office as second-class mail matter.
It looks as if former King Constantine of Greece will have to be consulted as to the future ruler of that country.

Capt. Taughtinghouse don't fail to call a spade a spade when he gives his reasons why he should support the Democratic ticket.

In order to elect Cox to the presidency, C. W. Gilbert, newspaper correspondent, says Democrats have got to carry Ohio, California and Nebraska. We are consoled in the thought that all political prophecies fail to pan out as predicted now and then. Hughes was elected four years ago through Teddy Roosevelt.

We expect to see some pretty good houses occupying President Wilson's seat in the White House before we pass out and a Southern woman at that.

Cox has not as yet given out any signs of nervousness, on the contrary from reports he seems to be as cool as a cucumber. Morrison isn't shedding any tears either.

Will wonders never cease? Frederick Whitehead, while in his diver's suit a work several fathoms under the sea gets telephone message he is a dad. Of course he quit work immediately. Next.

A gift of practically $9,000 to "Cyclone Mack" by the New Bern people goes to show that the evangelist possesses something else in his make-up beside gas. It's Greenville's time next.

Heart failure due to dilated heart and acute delirium following scurvy due to exhaustion following refusal to take food is what the jury of inquest said killed the Lord Mayor of Cork. He held up wonderfully well under the circumstances.

THE TOBACCO WAREHOUSEMEN

At the start of the tobacco season the tobacco warehousemen came in for a good deal of criticism on account of existing low prices. The criticism was, of course, unjust. A splendid editorial along this line appeared in a current issue of "Tobacco," a magazine devoted to the interest of the tobacco industry and we republish it here with.

In the South, some tobacco growers made retributive by the fall of prices are attributing blame to operators of tobacco warehouses. Such programs is naturally limited. For no intelligent man, knowing how warehousemen work, would say that they were at fault because tobacco now is selling lower than it did last year.

Instead of oppressing the farmer, the warehouseman has been, is and must be the dependable friend of the grower. To be successful at all, to remain in business, to build up trade, to persuade growers to bring their tobacco to his place, a warehouseman has to be very attentive, fair and liberal.

Though his resources are adequate even large for the market on which he operates, of course a warehouseman couldn't speculate to the extent of purchasing all the tobacco offered for sale in his locality.

Yet, by bidding, constantly he assists in keeping up prices. Whether they represent big companies, smaller concerns, or are acting independently, buyers in a warehouse are encouraged, almost forced at times, by the warehousemen, to pay higher prices.

Unless prices go so high that buying is stopped or seriously retarded, it is to the warehouseman's advantage to have prices stay up. His earnings are proportionate to sales, and high prices add to the prestige of his house. Most of the risk a warehouseman takes, the greater part of the loss inflicted on him if he is "unlucky," is chargeable directly to buying tobacco at a price higher than other buyers would offer.

Because of the depreciation of exchange, because of the sadly diminished possibilities of export trade, more than the warehouseman has on hand now tobacco that he bought at a very high price a year ago.

To the extent of his ability and resources, every warehouseman is a stimulator of trade in profitable to assist the farmer to obtain a market, the most profitable to be had.

"Practically without exception, the operators of tobacco warehouses are unusually fine men, honest, efficient, dignified and reliable business like and possessed of proper courage.

"Almost invariably, these are men of excellent standing, leading citizens, square men, individuals who have the respect and confidence of the entire community. Also, many of them are important tobacco growers. Through the depression of prices they are suffering losses.

Long before the 1920 crop was planted, warehousemen met at Wilson, N. C., and solemnly warned the farmer that an increased tobacco acreage would be productive of lower prices. Not because of any premeditated conspiracy, but surely and solely because conditions in Europe were becoming so bad, financially, that the customary amount of tobacco could not be exported.

Instead of defamation, the warehousemen are entitled to high praise."

NOT FIGHTING QUALITIES IN YOUR BLOOD

If You are Pale and Weak, Without Ambition, You Need a Tonic

TRY TAKING PEPTO-MANGAN

Rich Red Blood Fights off Disease and Keeps you Well and Enables You to Work with Pleasure

Serious sickness often comes when you least suspect. You may feel all right, but you haven't been exposed to contagion, yet all of a sudden you are flat on your back and in for a stage of sickness.

Your blood did not have fighting qualities. It was weak and thin. Your vitality and power of resistance were low.

When you overdo you use up energy. Your blood is driven to do more than it can. It becomes clogged with waste. The waste acts like poison. Disease germs get in your blood and dominate.

Don't let yourself run down. Take that good tonic, Pepto-Mangan. It makes rich red blood that will resist and rout out disease germs.

Pepto-Mangan is widely and heartily known by physicians. It is in either liquid form or tablet form. Both have the same effect.

Sold at any drug store. But be sure you get the genuine Pepto-Mangan—Gude's. Ask for it by the name and be sure the full name, "Gude's Pepto-Mangan," is on the package.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Former King Constantine of Greece maintains the attitude that he is still occupant of the throne and may not consent to the accession of his son Prince Paul says the London Times dispatch.

The former Queen Sophia is "prostrated with grief" over the death of her son Alexander.
