WARNING ISSUED OF FOUR BOGUS CHECKS

Drawn on Union Trust Company of Cleveland, Ohio, and Have Appearance of Being Genuine

Chief of Police J. H. Langston today issued a warning against four bogus checks he has been notified are being handled about the country. They are drawn on the Union Trust Company of Cleveland, Ohio, and each is for $34.40, and is signed by J. C. Baudien, paymaster, with the amount filled in with a check protector. They have been passed on grocers in the Middle West, and the person cashing the checks is described as being 55 to 60 years old, about six feet high and weighing about 200, with gray hair, clean shaven and wearing dark work clothes and hat.

The checks are said to be written on bankers safety paper, imprinted "Western Union Telegraph Company." Any one coming in contact with the checks is asked to notify police and banks. Chief Langston said.

Rev. P. D. Woodall, pastor of the Middleburg Methodist Episcopal church will preach the sermon. Mr. Nelson said that various pastors of the Henderson churches would preach during the week next week and the public is invited to attend.

PROHIBITION REAL ISSUE IN RUN OFF

mary. In order to get the nomination. Morrison's Expectations. However, the Morrison forces are counting on getting a good sized portion of the votes cast for Bowie, Grist and Simmons, even if the Reynolds forces are claiming the bulk of these votes. In the first place, the Morrison backers maintain that the announcements already made by Bowie and Grist that they would support Reynolds and try to throw their support to him, is already reacting unfavorably among those who voted for Bowie and Grist. For many of those who voted for Bowie and Grist are resenting the apparent presumption on the part of these two candidates that they can wrap up these same votes and deliver them to Reynolds in the second primary. The Morrison managers frankly believe that they have just as much chance to get at least half of the Bowie-Grist-Simmons vote as the Reynolds forces have.

Wrote "Dry" Votes. It is also pointed out by the Morrison supporters that virtually all of the 68,792 votes cast for Bowie, Grist and Simmons were dry votes, since if they had been cast by those opposing prohibition, they would have been cast for Reynolds. It is agreed that they were anti-Morrison votes, but that the opposition of these 68,000 voters to Morrison was based on something else than because he is dry and in favor of prohibition. Now that prohibition has become the one big issue in the campaign, together with the fact that the wet forces not only in North Carolina but over the entire country seem to be determined to kick Morrison out of the Senate and put Reynolds in, lesser differences will be forgotten, Morrison's friends believe. They also believe that those who voted for Bowie, Grist and Simmons will refuse to permit themselves to be used to nominate a wet Senator and that just as many of these will vote for Morrison. If not many more, since if they had been wet and had wanted a wet candidate, they would have voted for Reynolds in the first place.

It is further pointed out that there were almost 25,000 more Democrats who voted for governor in the primary June 4 than voted for Senator, since 379,470 votes were cast for governor and only 355,187 for the candidates for the senatorial nomination. These 25,000 were evidently not all interested in Reynolds, nor in Morrison either. But they also cannot be counted as wet votes. So the Morrison forces believe that with prohibition as a clear-cut issue, many of these 25,000 who did not vote will vote—and for Morrison rather than Reynolds. If a vote of 355,000 is cast in the second primary, Morrison will need to get only 43,000 more than he got last week to defeat Reynolds and win the nomination. If only 300,000 votes are cast, he will need to get only 16,000 more than the 135,000 he received to get the nomination.

MORE SCHOOLS OF STATE ARE MERGED

in view of the increase capital outlay expense it might put on the counties for the purchase of new trucks to take care of the additional transportation. Martin pointed out. So in most cases the consolidations made were limited to those that could be made without imposing any additional expense for transportation. A lack of adequate classroom space in several central schools also made a number possible consolidations impractical this year.

The consolidations which the board has been making is constantly reducing the number of one-teacher schools in the State, however, and giving more and more children better educational advantages. Martin pointed out. At the present time there are only 559 one-teacher schools left in the State, this number being 429 less than there were three years ago. Most of these one-teacher schools are now located in the isolated mountain sections in western North Carolina where consolidation and transportation facilities are costly and difficult. The status of the high schools in the State was improved by the board's action, since 52 three-teacher high schools have now been increased to four-teacher high schools, while a number of six-teacher elementary schools have been increased to seven-teacher schools.

FOUNTAIN DENIES PLAN FOR RUN OFF ON WET PLATFORM

to believe that it would be a waste of time and energy to call a second primary in view of the lead which Ehringhaus has and the size of the vote obtained by A. J. Maxwell, since most observers agree that Fountain could not expect to get any appreciable portion of Maxwell's vote. In fact, most of the political thought here agrees that in a second primary Ehringhaus would defeat Fountain from 75,000 to 100,000 votes, since Ehringhaus would not only get virtually the entire vote cast for him last Saturday but the bulk of the Maxwell vote and from 10 to 25 percent of the Fountain vote—and bandwagon vote.

However, there is an element in the Fountain following that is still urging him to call for a second primary, while it is also apparent that the Reynolds-for-Senator forces are doing all they can to encourage this element. The Reynolds forces believe that if there should be a second primary, they would have a much better chance to defeat Cameron Morrison for the senatorial nomination. There are indications that some offers of support from the Reynolds forces are being dangled as a bait before the Fountain followers, especially should Fountain come out against prohibition and run on a "wet" platform. But there are very few who believe Fountain would be tempted by this bait or by the hope that he could be sloshed into the gubernatorial nomination by the backwash from the Reynolds "wet" Senatorial campaign. Fountain undoubtedly has some real political horse-sense.

Risk for Reynolds.

Nor is it believed that Reynolds would run the risk of endangering his campaign or himself in the second primary by offering any aid and succor to an already defeated candidate. For both Reynolds and his supporters realize that in spite of his lead over Morrison, that Morrison is still an adversary that is not to be snickered at, especially now that his fighting blood is up, and that he is going to have all he can do to defeat Morrison in the second primary. Those close to Reynolds frankly admit that while they would like to see Fountain call for a second primary, that they do not want to see Fountain try to ride into the nomination on a wet plank tied to Reynolds' coat tail.

None of the thoughtful people in political circles here give the rumor any credence and admit with Fountain that it is "just bull" originating from those obscure minds in which most rumors originate. These also agree that a second gubernatorial primary is still unlikely.

Battle Over Platform Plank May Be Far-Reaching in Government and Business

The irrefragable question of prohibition may cause the greatest uproar, but economic issues will be more far-reaching.

Chicago, June 1.—That the Republican convention may not be the un-

Indeed, it may determine the course of the nation for generations to come.

But cry financial interests that is leading to socialization. The conservative Republican party is playing the nation into the very sort of uncommensurate a few years ago—and what's to be done about it? The conventions will not answer that, but they will indicate a trend.
