Society Hears of Baptist Colleges

The Maria Parham Missionary Society met Monday afternoon in the First Baptist church with a good attendance.

The meeting was opened with song, after which Mrs. Parker, the leader, announced the topic, "Christian Education," but said the regular program would give place to talks by college girls, each representing a Baptist school.

A program of unusual interest followed, all parts being taken by a representative of some college. Mrs. M. B. Garrett led the devotionals, giving many selections showing the elements of a great teacher in the life of Christ.

Campbell College was ably represented by Miss Mary Hughes and Ruth Hughes, the former telling of its many spiritual activities, and the beautiful Christian atmosphere, while the latter gave interesting facts about sports, literary societies and glee clubs.

Miss Elma Currin, a recent graduate of Meredith, was next on the program, and, owing to the absence of other speakers, had double duty. Full of loyalty and the spirit of Meredith, she had much to tell us of the interesting social and athletic, and her of its fundamental principles, its high rating and its efficient faculty, and lastly of its various impressive religious activities.

Mrs. M. C. Miles then favored the society with a beautiful solo, "God Be Merciful to Me."

Miss Hallie Frank Millia of Intermont College, the sole representative for this school, spoke very loyally of it, confining her talk to its religious activities.

Mrs. Kimball then led in prayer for the Christian schools of our land. Miss Sue Kelly made a talk on Baptist schools in foreign lands, told of their great number, their high standards and far reaching influence. She closed with a beautiful tribute to our Louisville training school, which is a source of information and inspiration to all who attend because of her high ideals and excellent faculty.

After a short business session, the society adjourned to the basement where the hostesses, Meadames Kate Watkins, W. E. Moss, A. J. Jones, served delicious refreshments.—Reported.

age. Stamp envelopes have been increased from three to four cents or two for seven cents. No increase has been made on postal cards or other pieces of mail.

From now until July 6 the regular charge of two cents will be made for each letter. The local post office is being supplied with a large quantity of three cent stamps, which after the above date will be in heavy demand by customers.

This increase has come as the result of an attempt of Congress to balance the Federal budget. Many items including bank checks, will be taxed under the new law.

Local postal authorities today called attention to the new rule and asked that letter writers be ready to comply with the regulations.

PROF. JOHN T. ALDERMAN. At the regular meeting of the Old Bute Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution, the following memorial was read and adopted:

The Old Bute Chapter, D. A. R., is deeply grieved on account of the death of Prof. John T. Alderman, realizing they have lost a friend who was always interested in their patriotic work and ever ready to share with them his wonderful fund of historic knowledge.

One of this chapters most valued treasurers is a beautiful gavel made from a piece of wood that was once a part of the Old Bute Court House. This historic relic was a gift from Professor Alderman, which needless to say, enhances its value.

The chapter members make grateful acknowledgement of his kindness to them. It will always be a source of pride that they could claim as a friend and wise counselor, one, who held a foremost place in North Carolina, as a citizen and scholar.

"He labored, day and night, in little things, No less than large, for the loved country's sake, Doing each day the best he might, with vision Fixed above, kept pure, by pure interest."

UNIVERSITY BOARD TOOK WISE COURSE

But Some Think It Lacked Nerve To Merge Engineering Schools

Daily Dispatch Bureau, In the Sir Walter Hotel, BY J. C. BANKERVILLE, Raleigh, June 16.—Did the University Consolidation Commission lose its nerve as some think, in refraining from making any drastic changes in the set-up of the new university system, especially in its failure to make any recommendations concerning the two schools of engineering, or has the commission acted wisely in refraining from making any drastic changes at this time?

There are some who frankly believe that the consolidation commission, including Governor O. Max Gardner, its chairman, lacked the nerve to go ahead and make some changes that should have been made at that too much effort has been made to stay in the middle of the road and thus keep as many people satisfied as possible. This is especially true on the part of those who expect the commission to make many more drastic recommendations than it has and who expected that a definite recommendation would be made with regard to the schools of engineering. In fact, the schools of engineering have been the chief bones of contention among those who have been either for or against the consolidation, from the outset. It has been no secret that the engineering department at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill has hoped that it would become the school of engineering under the consolidation plan and that the State College engineering work would be transferred to Chapel Hill. Those connected with the engineering department at the University, of course, did not want their department transferred to State College.

The situation here at State College has been somewhat different and rather paradoxical, in that while it wanted to retain its own engineering department, there has been little or no desire on the part of State College and those in the engineering department, to have the Chapel Hill department transferred here and a consolidated engineering school set up at State College. One of the big factors in this attitude is said to be the belief on the part of those connected with the engineering department at State College that if a consolidated school should be set up here, they would not occupy the positions of importance in it that they now occupy in the present department.

The course taken by the consolidation commission in refraining from making any definite recommendation about the schools of engineering at this time is expected to satisfy those on both sides of the engineering school fence. For neither of these departments is to be tampered with at the present time.

The impression some have, however, that the commission sidestepped the engineering school problem altogether is incorrect, according to members of the commission. The dominant reason for the decision not to tamper with the engineering departments at this time was the physical problem involved, especially with regard to equipment, machinery, laboratory space, and so forth, although there were other problems as well. So it was decided to leave the matter of any future changes in the engineering departments in the hands of the new executive committee and the new chancellor-to-be. This new executive committee of eight members and the new chancellor—who will not be selected until July 1, 1933—will have the power to study the engineering problem and make recommendations to the full board of trustees. No recommendations along this line are likely, then, until 1934 or 1935.

The report has gained currency here and the recommendations of the experts who made the survey of the various institutions was that the engineering schools be consolidated at the University at Chapel Hill as soon as possible. But this is vigorously denied by several members of the commission, although they say they cannot make public any of the recommendations that were made as yet. It is also denied that the experts recommended the consolidation of the engineering schools at State College, indicating that in delaying action on this phase of the consolidation problem, the commission acted in more or less accord with the opinions of most of the experts who made the surveys.

Those who know something of the size of the problems before the commission believe that it has acted wisely and for the best interests of the State.

"Say, Betty! Who Is That Bag of Bones?"

Tell her she'll have to put some meat on her bones if she wants to get her man! He likes to hold a softly rounded form—not a skeleton.

Tell her she can have the adorable feminine figure men admire by just taking mentha pepsin with her meals—a tablespoonful. One girl gained 14 pounds in 3 weeks that way, and now she's got such a lovely figure all mentha pepsin acts like gastic juice to draw out all the good of what you eat. You don't have to stuff on heavy foods or take any tonics—simply eat what you like and let mentha pepsin do the rest.

Be sure to get genuine mentha pepsin by asking for Dare's, Parker's Drug Store and other first-class druggists always sell it with a guarantee of money back if even one bottle doesn't give unmistakable results—Adv.
