At 7:45 o'clock he will speak at Caulder's store in South Henderson and again at 8:45 o'clock at Monk Hughes' "Shack" at North Henderson, with a band and parade following him to each place.

YOUNG FARMERS IN STATE CONVENTION

Vance Sends Large Delegation To Raleigh; Eaves Makes High Mark

Vance county units of the Young Tar Heel Farmers organization sent a large delegation this week to the annual convention of that organization held at State College, Raleigh, the group being in charge of Prof. G. B. Blum, vocational agriculture teacher in the county, who on Tuesday attended a conference there of vocational teachers in the State.

George Eaves, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George Eaves, of the Epsom school, near here, won sixth place in the livestock contest, although only a freshman in vocation classes. The first four and highest boys in the judging contest, who will represent North Carolina in the livestock show judging contest at Kansas City, in November, were Harry Carriger, of China Grove, with a mark of 364; Bradley Lassiter, of Garner, with a mark of 363; Richard Currin, of Star, 362, and Richard Jenkins, of Polkville, also with a mark of 362. Young Eaves made a score of 340, which was considered exceptionally good for a freshman contestant.

In a speaking contest, Walter Dudley, of Gates county, won the decision of the judges, his subject being, "Diversified Farm Systems." In the Vance county delegation were Raymond Stainback and Francis Perry Wilson, of the Middleburg school, and Percy Stewart and Leonidas Hoyle, of the Aycock school, as active delegates from those two chapters of the organization. Charles Breedlove, of Middleburg, was an alternate delegate. In the party also was Howell Steed, who was the first secretary of the Young Tar Heel Farmers of the State when that organization was brought into being some years ago. Henry White was also in the party, going along to make final preparations for entering State College in September as a freshman.
