

"Direct Action" Farmers May Bring On Nation-Wide Movement To Gain Ends

The First of a Series Clarifying the Farm Problem

Scenes in Iowa, where farmers' strike began

This is the first of a series of dispatches clarifying the farm problem.

By LESLIE EICHEL

Columbus, O., Sept. 12—The farm strike is expected to spread east of the Mississippi. And in an effort to bring the middleman and the large corporations which deal in farm products to terms a new kind of strike—a "buying strike"—may be declared for 30 days. In such a strike the farmer would stay home and refuse to purchase a thing—or sell a thing.

This one senses, in Columbus, the "capital" of the National Grange, the most conservative of farm organizations. The conservative organizations are on the defensive.

Columbus is the headquarters of the National Grange, Chicago of the Farm Bureau.

So determined has the Farmers' Union become that the two conservative farm organizations—the National Grange and the Farm Bureau—are discussing means of holding their own memberships in line. It is authoritatively reported.

The Farmers' Union is the "direct action" organization with headquarters in Oklahoma City. Milo Reno, president of the Farmers' Holiday association, is a leading figure in the union, of which John A. Simpson of Oklahoma City is president. Reno is viewed as a man of keen judgment as applied to the mass. The older farm organizations look upon him as "radical."

He is finding ready response to his summons to strike "until the cost of production for the farmer is recognized the same as the cost of production for the manufacturer."

The leading figure in the Farm Bureau is Edwin O'Neal, president. The Farm Bureau is the "wealthy" sister of the trio.

But the organization that for years has been looked upon as the "standard" organization is the National Grange, claiming 800,000 dues-paying members. (The National Grange dues are only one cent a month; local granges, 10 cents. The Farm Bureau believes more can be accomplished with more money.

Master of Grange The master of the National Grange is Louis J. Taber, for years a leader in farm organization activities, an unsuccessful candidate this year for the Republican nomination for U. S. senator from Ohio, and a national power in agricultural legislation.

Casting his eyes toward Iowa, Taber sees the farmers' strike spreading. And though it be fostered by another organization, it seems to this writer that it may cause the conservative Grange to urge some radical measures before it has finished. Thus the situation seems to an on-looker here in this conservative capital of agriculture.

Taber's views on the farmers' strike on the present critical juncture of the farm problem, therefore, are of utmost importance. The political entities of the nation heed his words. And, conversely, the radical strikers may achieve some of their aims through this conservative, acting to ward off extreme measures.

Taber, in an exclusive Central Press interview, will give his views in a latter dispatch.

Named for Governor Governor Wilbur L. Cross of Connecticut, who has been renominated as candidate to succeed himself at the State Democratic Convention. Governor Cross will be opposed by former Governor John H. Trumbull, the nominee of the Republican Party.

Wife Preservers For a change cook the picnic wieners at home in boiling water and place them in the butter roll. Wrap in waxed paper until the camp fire is lighted, then take the paper off, run the toasting fork through the whole sandwich, and toast lightly.
