HEAR APPEALS FOR INCREASED BUDGETS

Large School Systems Present Case Before Equalization Board

Daily Dispatch Bureau, In the St. Walter Hotel. BY J. C. BASKERVILLE. Raleigh, Oct. 6.—The State Board of Equalization is in session here today hearing the requests of the larger cities in the State for supplemental budgets for their special charter district school systems. The Board also expects to examine all the supplemental budgets submitted by these districts with a view to making their decision.

IN LOVING MEMORY OF MRS. JOHN DOWNY COOPER, SE.

In the death of Mrs. John Downy Cooper, Sr., a greatly beloved and in many ways a most wonderful woman, has gone to her reward. Before her marriage Mrs. Cooper was the beautiful Spotswood Burwell of Mecklenburg County, Virginia, a descendant of the Spotswoods, Marshalls and Gayles, who were the history makers of Virginia and North Carolina, standing out boldly in all affairs of State. Not only distinguished for such ancestry, but in many activities. Her wonderful work among the Colonial Dames, Daughters of the American Revolution and the United Daughters of the Confederacy. When quite a young girl she joined the Methodist Church and has been an untiring worker in that Communion ever since.

A woman of broad sympathies, Mrs. Cooper always had time to listen to and look after the down and out and to help the under dog in the fight against a hard world. Innumerable noble deeds are enrolled to her credit, though many will never be known as she was the soul of modesty where her own virtues were concerned. If her attention was called to any of them, the reply would always be, "Why what I did was never anything very much."

I cannot refrain from adding my own personal tribute to one who never failed in friendship through the years. My young son and I were honored guests in her home immediately after the loss of a splendid boy, my eldest son, were the recipients of her kindness and affection as she and her husband helped us forget our sorrow and find courage to take up and go on. We feel that we have lost a friend that can never be replaced. Hers was a beautiful Christian Character, and she was a wonderful citizen, a noble mother and a devoted wife. We always thought of her as being among those spoken of as, not the ones that rush the softest but holding out to the end. This she did in all her undertakings.

To be seen no more in this world her memory, like the fragrance of a matchless flower will linger on, never to be forgotten by those who knew her, or by those who will be told of her in days to come. JOSEPH R. ESTES, Birmingham, Alabama. August 20th, 1932.

Separated Areas Struck By Storm With Heavy Loss

Wilson, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Severe windstorms swept a patch about 100 yards wide through the L. P. Woodward farm near here last night, demolishing tobacco barns and uprooting trees. A store was blown across the highway. The wind struck in the vicinity of Fieldsboro, 16 miles east of here, and raked a path a mile and a half long, then skipped to Woodward's farm five miles from here.

ONE PERSON IS INJURED IN SOUTHERN PINES STORM Southern Pines, Oct. 6 (AP)—One person was injured, several buildings were unroofed and a number of automobiles were damaged by falling trees when a severe windstorm which passed through Pee Dee, S. C., yesterday struck this area last night.

Roosevelt's Acquiescence In Rehabilitation Program Farm Leader's Main Hope

(Continued from Page One.) more or less Republican. Milo Reno of the National Farmers' union and organizer and head of the Farmers' Holiday association limits the bread basket states strictly to those which produce a surplus of a diversity of foodstuffs—Wisconsin, Minnesota, the two Dakotas, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri. Eight all told. Iowa leads, Missouri is at the tail end of the procession, not because it does not produce vast quantities of food, but because its three major cities of St. Louis, Kansas City and St. Joseph consume so much of it. Illinois, Indiana and Ohio classify as important agricultural states but not as states with a surplus. What they produce they consume at home.

What the farmers raise in the more westerly states, like Wyoming, Idaho, Montana and Colorado, the farmers themselves and the miners, mostly, eat up, no surplus. Arkansas and Oklahoma are agricultural but they go extensively in for cotton which is inedible. Milo Reno wants all these commonwealths in his movement. Indeed, Oklahoma, notably, already is strongly organized.

But the "food belt" proper is the belt with a surplus. Iowa, being the solidest agricultural "meat" of any of the "food belt" states, is hardest hit by agricultural distress. This explains why it is the center of the farm uprising.

Des Moines is the political capital of the uprising. Sioux City is more like field headquarters. It is the place to visit if one wishes to see action. Des Moines is richer in information. Just as one might suppose would be the case, with a national election so near, the farmers are looking forward to Nov. 8 as the date on which to make the first real trial of their strength in their campaign for conditions more satisfactory to them. If they win, doubtlessly they will sit back for awhile to see what comes of their victory. "But if they lose? Then what?" I put this question to Milo Reno, at his office in the Farmers' Union building in Des Moines. "In plain terms," said Milo Reno—"What will follow if President Hoover is re-elected?"

With that he proceeded to tell me that he thinks will follow if President Hoover is re-elected. It was interesting, but I can better retell it hereafter. At the moment the point of I am seeking to make is that Farm Leader Reno considers that his forces will have suffered a defeat if President Hoover is re-elected.

From many things I have heard in the "food belt," I do not believe that the farmers' high command look upon Governor Roosevelt's utterances thus far as offering a clean-cut program which can be guaranteed to rehabilitate agriculture—for the simple reason, they obviously surmise that he knows of none. But it clearly is their opinion that "his heart is right." They have ideas of their own on the subject of agricultural rehabilitation and want to be able to count on the Washington administration's acquiescence. They do count on it from Gov. Roosevelt; not from President Hoover. Incidentally, Milo Reno normally is a Republican.

APPEAL WAS FROM REVERSAL GIVEN IN MANDAMUS RULING

(Continued from Page One.) was special legislation, and superseded all general statutes that might otherwise apply. McAdams was represented in court by former Governor Nathan L. Miller and Harold K. Medina, former law partner of McKee. The board of elections and the chairman of both the Democratic and Socialist political organizations in the counties comprising the greater city, maintained that the mayor of New York was a constitutional officer, that the State Constitution provides for elections to fill vacancies on the election day next succeeding the happenings of the vacancy and that there was nothing in the New York City charter to forbid such an election. Six of the seven judges concurred in the opinion. Judge Lehman did not vote.

The people of India are more interested in religion than politics.
