Germany Is Bewildered In Muddled Campaign As Election Comes Sunday

Charges and Counter Charges Fly Fast as Voters Prepare To Elect New Reichstag

NO PARTY LIKELY TO GET MAJORITY

Present Situation Will Thus Be Renewed and Reichstag May Be Dissolved, Dictatorship Established Or Peace Made With the Various Parties.

Berlin, Nov. 5. (AP)—Germany was confronted today with a bewildering barrage of charges and counter charges as her voters prepared to elect a new Reichstag tomorrow.

It was generally conceded that no party would be able to gain a majority of the seats in the Reichstag and this state of affairs would appear to leave three courses open to the Junker government of Chancellor Franz von Papen. They were:

1. The Reichstag could be dissolved and the same situation confronted as made the election necessary.

2. A dictatorship could be established.

3. The government could make its peace with the parties of the center and right and govern with them through the Reichstag.

The public is invited to assemble in front of the Dispatch office, where announcements will be megaphoned from the second story window as usual. Every one except those directly connected with the actual work of tabulation and announcing is urgently requested not to come inside, for the crowd always interferes with the work.
