BALANCING BUDGET IS CHIEF PROBLEM TO BE CONFRONTED (Continued from Page One.) drastic cuts must be made in the cost of government, and that salaries of public employees should be further lowered. With all present sources of revenue steadily sinking, including gasoline, income, franchise, license and other taxes, the legislature will be hard pushed to find a source from which to gather the approximately $3,800,000 which the 15-cent ad valorem tax was called on to furnish for school support. Sentiment toward any form of sales tax is not strong, answers to an Associated Press poll of all members showed, but many members who oppose such taxation frankly stated they did not see how the budget could be balanced without some such tax basis. Principal among the side issues expected to hold the spotlight during the legislative weeks ahead, is prohibition. Other side issues almost certain to come up will be some changes in the consolidation plans for the University of North Carolina, agitation for an eight months State-supported school; consolidation of all public school administration under one unit, provision of rental or free tests, and changes in the industrial commission statutes.

TWO TRUCK OPERATORS CERTAIN THEY SAW BODY

Mt. Ranier, Md., Dec. 31—(AP)—Two truck operators yesterday reported to the Mt. Ranier police chief that they were certain they saw the body of R. S. McCoin, missing Henderson, N. C. Attorney, in an automobile in Richmond early on the morning of December 23. The men were Robert M. Rogers, of near Mt. Ranier, and Carl Hansen, of Washington. They told Chief Eugene P. Plummer they saw a man's body in a car at the entrance of the Petersburg turnpike to Richmond and were told by three youths in the car that the man had been killed in an automobile accident and they were taking the body to an undertaker. Rogers was quoted by Plummer as saying that after seeing pictures of McCoin, they were certain it was his body in the old car, which apparently bene in a wreck. Rogers, whom the police chief said he had known for several years, said they were driving a fruit truck northward and reached the junction of the Petersburg road and Hull streets about 5:30 o'clock on the morning of December 23. Their story, as told by Plummer, was that they left their truck at a gasoline station and went across the street to a lunch-room. Hansen, who was the last to enter, noticed the body propped up in the front seat of the automobile. The three boys were also in the lunchroom and a policeman was there, too. The two truck operators were told by the youths that the man had been killed in an accident. As they left, Rogers and Hansen looked at the body in the car closely

Off To A New Start

Plan of Sharing Jobs Now Has Warm Endorsement Of Hoover Administration

(Continued from Page One.) these two, to tell the truth, having fallen so far short of giving the results expected of them as to make the idea of a third somewhat ridiculous. In the meantime, however, a group known as the National Share-the-Work committee had been gaining headway, with the Standard Oil's premier executive at its head, and it is to Chairman Teagle that President Hoover's chief aids now seem to be turning, to save the situation as they turned to Chairman Gifford a year ago and to Chairman Woods the preceding year. Anyway, Secretaries of Commerce and Labor Roy D. Chapin and William N. Doak (the cabinet pair most directly interested in the industries' and workers' problems) recently have broadcast appeals to large employers the country over, bespeaking their co-operation in the job-sharing program which is mentioned by both department chiefs as having the president's warm endorsement. The plan is simple. An employer who has a certain amount of work to be done is urged to cut it into the maximum number of jobs consistent with the payment to each worker of a sufficient wage to exist on—thus providing for as many men as possible, without increasing his own production costs. Indeed, an employer who has a force already working for him on full time is advised to reduce its working hours (and pay, accordingly), in order to permit of numerical additions. Chairman Teagle is quoted to the effect that 3,500,000 jobs have been created in this fashion though it is not stated how many previously fully employed workers have been put upon part time, with correspondingly reduced incomes, in the process. It is true that labor leaders do not like the system. President William Green of the A. F. of L. to be sure, grudgingly acquiesces in it as an "emergency necessity," but other officials of the federation quite generally are unqualifiedly against it. At its best, they say, it compels the workers to carry the full burden of unemployment.
