One Scale For Sales Tax Looms

ment made following it by Maxwell to the effect that "the department is considering changes in the sales tax1 regulations that will simplify the application of the tax, including one composite schedule to apply to all merchants." The conference was between members of the executive council and secretary of the merchants association and Commissioner Maxwell, with her sister, Mrs. Julian Wyche Director Harry McMullan of the sales his announcement that he was "considering changes" in the sales tax regulations, especially the setting up of a single composite schedule for passing the tax alon geo the public, is interpreted as meaning that this will announced his regulations with reassociation in particular, through tions in particular. They have vigorously objected to the regulation in which he made it optional rather than mandatory for the merchants to show the tax separately from the selling price and have wanted it made mandatory to show both the selling price and tax on every sale. They have also opposed the four schedules set up for passing the tax along, asking that only one composite schedule be adopted, to apply to all alike.

Commissioner Maxwell said nothing in his statement following this conference about the first point involved, concerning the showing of the sales price and tax on all advertised still is convinced he was right in ruling that this should be optional and that to make this mandatory would work a real hardship on many merchants. He has been convinced that much of the agitation for this ruling has been coming from the extreme element in the ranks of merchants who are primarily interested in making the sales tax more unpopular than it now is. It is also understood that a good many merchants who at first wanted this regulation made mandatory about showing the tax as a separate item on every sale, as well as on all advertised prices, do not want this now. For some merchants who are insisting on doing this are losing business as a result, finding out that it is bad sales psychology. They are finding out that customers are more likely to buy an article marked merely "price 20c" than if marked "Price 19c plus 1c sales tax," which was the way most of the merchants wanted the prices advertised

There has been a growing dissatisfaction among the merchants, however, with the four different schedules set up by Mr. Maxwell in the sales tax regulations. They have argued that they were confusing and that many merchants did not know which schedules to adopt. They also maintained that some merchants would adopt the schedule under which they could get the most taxes from the public, regardless of whether it was the schedule they should adopt or not. They also maintained that the four schedules were too confusing to the buying public.

"Unless these schedules are changed and one single composite schedule adopted, the people of the state will be charged fully $5,000,000 more a year than the thre per cent tax calls for," Dowell said of this ruling. "In order to safeguard and protect the public this regulation should be changed.'

The Statement to be prepared will show how the cost to the county will be no more under the merger than the county hospital is costing the county at the present time. A financial statement has already been made up showing that ratio of costs, this having been prepared by experts of the Duke Endowment hospital section

It is contended that the merger would provide a much better hospital and that charity work could be done much more efficiently and at no greater cost. # AT THE END of the RAINBOW

From Chicago Sally Gwynne's new job as secretary to a Florida millionaire looked like the proverbial "pot of gold" at the end of the rainbow, a veritable vacation after months of tramping the streets looking for work.

When she arrived she found the pot contained not gold but a. seething conglomeration of racketeering, murder and mystery, enough to make any young girl turn back. Sally remains to find, in the midst of all the sordid mess, high romaance.
