In and Out of Social Register

These four beauties view the 1934 edition of the New York Social Register with varied feelings. Mary Duncan, screen star who married Laddie Sanford, polo player, is in, therefore happy. The same is true of Dorothy Jordan, another film actress, who achieved success on the stage. But June Blossom, regular registerite, who did not do so well being left out this time, and Whitney Bourne, who didn't do so well being in the footlights, remains on society's roll of honor.

New Books For Adults Are Placed In Library

(By the Library.) It has been several weeks since new books have been added to the adult collection. At this time a number of new books are being added. Several biographies are among the new books. "Anne Sullivan Macy: Story Behind Helen Keller" by Nella Braddy is a biography which everyone interested in Helen Keller will enjoy. "The autobiography of Alice B. Toklas" is the life of Gertrude Stein written by herself as though it were the autobiography of her secretary, Alice B. Toklas. "Old Gimlet Eye" is Lowell Thomas's vivid account of the adventures of Smedley D. Butler. Lord Craigmyle has written a biography of John Marshall bearing the title "John Marshall in Diplomacy an din Law." Two books of history which will be an interesting reading as fiction are "The Edwardian Era" by Andre Maurois and Constance Lindsay Skinner's "Beaver, Kings and Cabins." The latter is a colorful account of the fur trade in North America from early colonial times to the present. In the "Edwardian Era" apt characterizations are given of the history of the reign of Edward VII. but most of the attention is focused on the English royal family. Contrasting views of China are given in two books recently added. "Oil for the Lamps of China" by Alice Hobart gives a view of modern China. The operations of a great American corporation in China as they are reflected in the experiences of Stephen Chase, the company's agent in the interior, make a panoramic novel of unusual merit in setting, theme and characterization. "All Men Are Brothers" is a representative translation by Pearl S. Buck of the great Chinese novel "Shui Hu Chuan." It is a novel which is the accretion of centuries and which is a panoramic portrayal of Chinese civilization. Agatha Christie's new mystery story "Thirteen at Dinner" is now at the library. Among the books of travel Cohen-Portheim's "The Spirit of France" and "Spoken in Tibet" by Henrietta Merriek may be found. A book for children which adults will be interested in is "Little Carolina Bluebonnet" by Mabel Pugn, a North Carolinian. Life on a remote Icelandic farm is pictured with simplicity and great regard for the beauty of the changing seasons and the constant contrasts of the land in Svend Fleuron's "The Wild Horses of Iceland." Joseph Lincoln's "Back Numbers" is a collection of short stories which preserves the flavor of Cape Cod characters and customs of quarter century ago. "Lamb In His Bosom" by Caroline Miller is a quiet chronicle of isolated, hard-working people on a Georgia farm in the years preceding the Civil War. Readers always welcome a new Jeffery Farnol book, and the new one "The Way Beyond" will be especially welcomed as it is a continuation of "The Broad Highway." Twenty-one years have passed-Charmian and Peter, now Sir Peter, are just as you would expect them to be. "A Gay Family" by Ethel Boileau is a story of contemporary English life in which the activities of an interesting family are recorded by the mother, Alison Mallory. Marguerite Steen's "Spider," Booth Tarkington's "Presenting Lily Mars," "Golden Rain" by Margaret Wilder, and "Dream Island" by Florence Diddell are some of the other fiction books recently added.

CONTRACT BRIDGE WRITTEN FOR CENTRAL PRESS By E. V. SHEPARD FAMOUS BRIDGE TEACHER

THE USEFUL JUMP ASSIST THE JUMP assist frequently is most useful and enlightening, especially when the opening bidder has made a minimum declaration, when there are slam hopes or when the side is vulnerable. It is probable that South never would have dared bid game on a simple assist by partner, and North might not have dared do so either, as North and South were vulnerable and East and West were not vulnerable.

Lloyd C. Douglas has a new story "Precious Jeopardy." The book is little more than a short story but it is a Christmas story and by this author it will be popular. A hilarious tale of three Southern children and Mammy written for adults is "Worth Remembering" by Rhys James.

Miss Bass Hostess To Club Tuesday

Miss Betsy Bass was hostess to the Junior Woman's Club Tuesday afternoon at her home on North William street. Christmas papers featured the afternoon's program, with three papers being given by members on Christmas in Italy, in France and in Germany. Several Christmas carols were sung by the group. At the conclusion of the program the hostess served a delicious salad course.

UNOCCUPIED HOUSE BURNS ON TUESDAY

An unoccupied house some distance west of Elmwood cemetery was burned late Tuesday afternoon, the glare lighting up the western sky from the city. A truck from the fire department was sent out in that direction, but did not reach the scene of the fire, because it was outside the city and no water facilities were available there. So far as could be learned the house was unoccupied, and it was not known just how the fire originated.
