consideration by endorsing W. Ney Evans, also of High Point, for one of the posts. But indications here today are that, despite some very strong endorsements, Evans does not seem to be in line for one of these appointments. It also appears that neither Dean M. T. Van Kecke, of the University of North Carolina, law school nor Professor Leslie Craven, of the Duke University law school, are likely to be offered the posts, although at one time their names were prominently mentioned. But while both are admitted to have the necessary legal More Cwa Works knowledge and background, the fact that Craven is a professor in Duke University, which is supported in large degree by Duke Power Company money, seems to have disqualified him for further consideration, while some objections were also raised against the appointment of Van Hecke, large ly because his knowledge of utilities was believed to be too academic. Pearce of the posts, largely because of the great interest he has taken editorially in the prospective make-up of the make-up of the commission. Some think Governor Ehringhaus could not do better than appoint Daniels one of the associate commissioners as a representative of the school of thought in the State favoring more rigid control of public utilities, especially of power companies.

While the pay of the two associate commissioners is limited to $25 a day with the proviso that they shall not receive more than $900 in any one year, regardless of the amount of time they must give to their duties, it is agreed here that these posts are extremely important. For the two associates must sit with Utilities Commissioner Stanley Winborne in all cases involving the public good or public policy and in all cases in which sums of money amounting to $3,000 or more are involved. The two associate commissioners will have the power to veto any decision by the commissioner and thus will hold the balance of power in all decisions affecting rates, valuations and s forth

Sent Up To Superior Court; Misses Trogdon Victims on Young Street

Francis Peoples and Jesse Burwell, Megro youths in their upper teens. both students of Henderson Institute, pleaded guilty before Mayor Irvine B. Watkins in police court this aftereoon to charges of "assault on the erson" in snatching a purse from Miss Myrtle Trogdon on Young street last night about 7:30 o'clock, and both were bound over to superior court. That court being now in session, the papers were sent immediately to Solicitor W. H. S. Burgwyn at the court house, and by mid-afternoon a true bill had been returned against them by the grand jury. The case will be disposed of at this term of court.

Mayor Watkins lacked jurisdiction and found probable cause and sent the two defendants up to the higher court.
