Tribute Is Paid By Board To Life and Service of The Donor

A tribute to the life and services of the late Colonel Henry Perry has been adopted by the trustees of the H. Leslie Perry Memorial Library, an institution of which he was one of the ronors, with his wife and daughter in-law. The tribute follows:

"It is with deep sorrow, yet with tender and enriched memories, that we record the passing from our midst of Colonel Henry Perry.

"He was a foremost citizen, standing always for uprightness, honesty. and justice, justice tempered ever with most gracious mercy.

"He had a genius for friendship, as Miss Annie Harris, who underwent testified to by the overwhelming voices of those who held him in high public office, an office he filled with unsurpassed integrity.

> "His sympathies were as broad a human life, and he was the beloved counselor of the poor, the needy, the distressed at all times.

"But the H. Leslie Perry Memorial Library, of which he was one of the donors, stands, and will stand, as the perpetual witness to the reach and fineness of his human understanding and sympathy. Through care, study and thought here are, and will be, enshrined the highest, noblest, truest. best thoughts of the ages, uplifting and inspiring all who may choose broadening and enriching not only the minds but the hearts and spirits of young and old who may be its many beneficiaries.

"While we shall miss sorely his genial presence, and wise counsel, we are grateful for his life. While we would record our admiration and atfection for him, we would also express our tenderest sympathy for his loved ones as we share their sorrow with them.'

(Reported to the Dispatch.)

There will be a union mid-week meeting at the Methodist Episcopal church tonight of the Presbyterian and Methodist groups to study and discuss the matter of "The Home and Christian Living." Special topics to be considered will come under the head of "The Importance of Leisure Time," "The Relation of Liesure time to Discipline and to Adulthood," "Leis ure Time and the Church" and the subject of "Keeping Pace with the Children's Growth." How should par ents re-act when our children criticize us? How many should parents retain the confidence of their children? How may parents be on such terms of corradeship with their children that they will tell them wha. they tell others? How can confidence in the parents be best established and maintained? How can parents best help children and young people to become masters of their own lives? It is generally recognized that successful Christian homes are more important in the matter of solving the problems confronting the youth of today than any other one thing, and therefore it is highly important that Christian people who are interested in young people meet and discuss topics of this kind.
