"Blanks are all we have drawn," said State Police Sergeant Short when he was questioned today on the progress made in the manhunt, which has blanketed every city, town and highway for miles around since the two desperadoes shot their way out of jail Saturday morning. Sentenced to die within the next 60 days, they got their break for freedom under the sham of a conference with their attorney, Charles W. Moss. Police say they are "pretty sure" the guns used by the gangsters in blazing their path to freedom was smuggled to them in a can apparently containing chicken. Police said the guns were taken in by Maf's mother, but she denies it.
