CHANGE MAY COME IN ENGLISH SYSTEM

People Want "New Deal" There, But Fear It May Go Too Far

By LESLIE EICHEL, Central Press Staff Writer
New York, Dec. 19.—If England could hold an election now, the Labor party would win, according to word from overseas.

But England cannot hold an election. The present government will risk no election prior to 1936—unless there is a vote of lack of confidence. The Conservatives will not vote lack of confidence in themselves. They know what would occur.

The Conservatives, through a cry of national alarm, put the Labor party out of office in August, 1931. Its majority in parliament was overwhelming. It took the English public only a year to realize that it had been "tricked." The "coalition" government merely was a Tory group, which decided to try to perpetuate things as they were.

Even Conservative papers call the "coalition" a "do-nothing government." J. Ramsay MacDonald, erstwhile Labor prime minister, was carried over as the coalition prime minister (to present a "front"). The real prime minister is Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader, president of the council.

BASICALLY STRONG
England, as a nation, has not suffered the severest pangs of the depression, as the United States has.

England is an older, more settled country. It has not had the recent speculative growths, its money institutions remained conservative. Britain has remained conservative true to its national character. Its forward-looking social legislation (of the past) was promulgated to save the conservative order.

INACTIVITY
England, booming with activity on the surface, but with living standards for workers still far below those of the United States, presents an anomaly.

"If we have 'prosperity,' why change?" ask the Conservatives. "But it is 'prosperity' for a few," Labor answers.

And a general public, in between, although desirous of change, is fearful the Tories may be correct. But the mass of opinion, as evidenced in by-elections, is for change. The only change the Tories thus far have granted is a protective tariff—and this Labor believes is a step back toward the "dark ages."

Three Minute Relief From Your Headache

When you have one of those violent, nerve-racking headaches, from inorganic causes, you can get soothing relief in three minutes with "B. C." a reliable, pleasant-to-take remedy. "B. C." is prepared by a registered pharmacist, compounded on a different principle from most relief-giving agencies in that it contains several ingredients, so blended and proportioned as to accomplish in a few minutes what we believe no one drug formula can do in so short a time. "B. C." should also be used for the relief of muscular aches and pains, common colds and neuralgia; for reducing fever and quieting a distressed nervous system without opiates, narcotics or such habit-forming drugs. Get "B. C." in 10c and 25c packages, wherever drugs are sold.—(Adv.)

No Arrests Made In the Breaking Of O'Neil Window

No arrests have as yet been made growing out of the fight said to have engaged in by several white and colored youths near the corner of Garnett and Winder streets last Saturday night. In the argument some rocks were thrown and one of them crashed through one of the large plate glass windows in the handsome new front of the O'Neil Hardware Company store. Before the identity of the youth who hurled the rock could be learned, he had made his escape. A colored boy taken in charge early in the week by Police Officer W. N. Strickland proved not to be the guilty one. A white youth was struck on the head by one of the rocks and was knocked down, but was not seriously hurt, so far as was learned.

Nationalizing Of Land Is U. S. Aim

well-equipped houses, to be paid for by the occupants on exceedingly long-time terms and at low interest rates, tackles the proposition from the urban angle. In similar fashion both Ickes and Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins are pushing a campaign to enable agriculturally-minded folk to pay for small farms, sold to them by Uncle Sam, in a series of trifling instalments, stretched over a period of many years.

Administration spokesmen describe their program to this general purpose, anyway.

But do they expect the urban homes and the farm patches ever really to be paid for?

It looks like good guessing that they do not. It appears as if they expect interest payments to the government to continue on down through the generations, as a kind of rental. The occupants of the urban homes and the farms would remain undisturbed in possession of them, but title to the soil, which the farmers still and on which the urban homes stand, remaining vested in Uncle Sam.

BROAD SCOPE
If the plan works, the administration undoubtedly believes its scope will be extended.

Through farm loans and RFC loans to various interests considerable progress has been made with it already. That so to say, it seems clear that a substantial proportion of these loans never will be repaid, the property on which they were made thus gravitating into government ownership. Not that those who actually are utilizing it will be evicted; they will go on paying interest while they continue to utilize it profitably enough to do so. But ultimately it will become recognized that they are paying ground rentals to the government; not interest on loans.

It is presumable that rental readjustments will be necessary from time to time, rates being increased on yield which is so situated as to yield especially handsome returns; reduced elsewhere.

Books For Readers With Diversified Interests

(By the Perry Library)

The new books which have just been placed on the shelves of the H. Leslie Perry Memorial Library are for readers with diversified interests.

Dr. E. W. Zimmermann's "World Resources and Industries" which won the Mayflower Award for the most outstanding book published by a North Carolinian during the past year is for those interested in world economics. It is a comprehensive survey of the agricultural, mineral and industrial resources of the world considered from the point of view of their availability of man's use.

"The Secret of Victorious Living" by Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick is a book of sermons which are excellent in their interpretation of the world today and the God of all time.

In Marie Dressler's "My Own Story" as told to Mildred Harrington we catch early glimpses of an irrepressible tomboy, dashing from one dramatic episode to another, of the roving family life, of the dauntless young troupier of fourteen, of heartbreaking ventures and gallant courage in the theatre of nearly half a century ago. It is more than a life story of a great actress—it is the record of an indomitable spirit of a woman with a definite philosophy of life and a kindly heart.

"The Forty Days of Musa Dagh" by Franz Werfel is a long serious novel. A Europeanized Armenian, returning to his home in Syria during the World War, was caught in the Turkish campaign which aimed at the wholesale extinction of the Armenian people. Under Bagradian's leadership the inhabitants of seven villages withdrew to the fountain of Musa Dagh, where, for forty days, they resisted a siege by the Turkish army.

For the lovers of poetry there is Edwin Arlington Robinson's new book "Amaranth." Mr. Robinson has put into this poem all the depth of his pity for, and understanding of the failings and vanities of human nature.

"Captain Caution" by Kenneth Roberts is a chronicle of Arundel and an historical novel of the War of 1812. Daniel Marvin is returning from China to Arundel, Maine, on the Olive Branch, an armed merchant barque, commanded by Captain Dornmark. The captain's daughter is aboard. When the barque is captured by the British many interesting events occur.

David Ewen's "Composers of Today" is the first attempt to present a comprehensive work devoted exclusively to modern composers. Approximately two hundred composers are discussed in this book, representing twenty-three different nationalities. With modern composers coming more to the fore, and acquiring a greater importance in the eyes of the music public, it is to be expected that we should desire to know something more about them.

for my own amusement" Richardson Wright says of his "Winter Diversions of A Gradens." He has written delightful pieces for those who like to garden and garden through reading. There are chapters on flower painting ladies, summer houses of all kinds, on the church's role in the garden, and the history of plant exploring.

A book for children which adults will enjoy is "Mary Poppins" by P. L. Travers. It is the story of two charming children and a fascinating, fantastic nursemaid.

Consolidation of Counties Might Be Legislative Issue

members of the General Assembly. It is no secret here, however, that Governor J. C. Ehringhaus is convinced that county consolidation is one of the simplest and surest means of reducing local property taxes and in several recent speeches he has indicated that he may ask the legislature to do something about this matter. As a result, he has been strongly commended editorially in a number of the newspapers of the State. The most recent issue of The University News Letter, published by the University of North Carolina Extension Division, reprints an editorial from the Charlotte Observer commending the governor for his position with regard to county consolidation, in which it says:

"If Governor Ehringhaus is ambitious to single out some possible line of achievement to major in during the remainder of his administration and one that would identify his regime to posterity as one of great achievement, he will follow up the idea he dropped while in Charlotte the other day and go to the mat with this important problem of county consolidation. . . . The people of the State are not realizing what a financial drain it is upon them to keep a 100 different counties under systems of government that are in many instances obsolete and in many other instances represent costly duplications of effort."

There is no doubt among those who have studied the problem that the taxpayers of the State could be saved millions of dollars a year through county consolidation, millions that might be used to help support the schools, for instance. Yet there is little to indicate any hope of getting any actual consolidation legislation through this session of the General Assembly.

But if there are too many county governments, and if the cost of these is too costly, are there not then too many county superintendents of schools? If the State could operate more efficiently and economically with only 50 counties instead of 100 counties, could it not operate its schools more efficiently and with less cost with only 50 district superintendents of schools instead of with 100 county superintendents? And now, with the schools already a part of a Statewide school system, with the counties no longer levying taxes for schools or contributing to their maintenance, except where they desire to, there is no longer any reason why the county should be retained as the unit of school administration. It is pointed out. It is estimated that the cost of supervision alone could be reduced $200,000 a year below its present cost by abolishing the county as the administrative unit and dividing the State up into administrative districts, as has been done in the administration of the highways.

Yet the school forces are bitterly opposed to any consolidation in the supervision of the schools, even though they seem in favor of county consolidation. One of the principal items on the legislative program of the North Carolina Education Association as recently made public here, is opposition to any change from the county as the administrative school unit.

One of Daughters Of R. J. Reynolds Buys Home Place

Winston-Salem, Dec. 19.—(AP)—Mrs. Mary Reynolds Babcoag, daughter of the late R. J. Reynolds, has purchased Reynolds, family home of the tobacco family, and will live there several months each year, and will restore the home and estate to the condition which existed prior to the death of her mother, Mrs. J. Edward Johnston, it was announced today.

The purchase was made from Reynolds, Inc., whose capital stock is owned by the Safe Deposit and Trust Company of Baltimore, trustee under the will of Mrs. Johnston. The price could not be learned, but the transaction was said to be the largest real estate deal in Forsyth's history.

Frederick M. Sackett, of Louisville, Ky., lawyer, ex-Senator and former Ambassador to Germany, born at Providence, R. I., 55 years ago.
